There’s more to Roy Moore and “his” 2½-ton Ten Commandments monument than appeared at that August 2003 rally in Montgomery, Alabama. Let’s review what we’ve learned about its origins.

Among all the world’s media that came on cue to cover the story of moral law’s setup and takedown, this newspaper alone got it eventually right and reported as much. But neither we, nor possibly most of the “news” munchkins present at the time, were privy to what that false flag of a new kind was all about.

The First Freedom, August 2003:
By Olaf Childress

At press time, what our unpredictable federal judge and his atheist supporters would attempt next remained unclear. I motored up for a press conference July 28 on the Alabama Supreme Court steps in Montgomery, where Christian Coalition’s John Giles explained his organization’s position. It was no different than that of Chief Justice Roy S. Moore and 77% of all Alabamians: we do not back down.

I overheard Police Captain Blackburn telling Mr. Giles that he was restraining a gaggle of uninvited atheist provocateurs down at street level so as not to interfere, but naturally they got plenty of sympathetic attention from the media anyway. Several organizations on this day explained why the showdown. It’s not yet necessary for out-of-Staters to start arriving, but know that all internet minutemen on our list will get the word immediately, learning whom to contact and which day’s relay they might join if it comes to that. Remember, the feds waited out Indianapolis Baptist Temple, moving in only after the crowds had thinned somewhat. But we’re not for thinning here in Alabama.

Let us network with campgrounds, RV parks, hotels and motels in the Montgomery area, and come prepared for getting to the scene of this attempted rape of our culture without first having to round up sleeping bags, cellphones and first aid kits. Don’t let your incoming email box pile up; download everything from the Christian Coalition and this newspaper immediately. We might stagger the beginning dates for each watch, regardless of how many days one remains near the monument, by last names: the 26 letters of the alphabet corresponding to the first 26 days of August, etc. Not much of an idea, but volunteers can fill in the gaps and, unlike the fedjudge’s plan, this one yields on a moment’s notice to better judgment and common sense necessity.

This is the rallying point we’ve waited for. Federal Judge Myron Thompson, if you want to be called Madman, mount your crane. If not, come kneel beside us.

Chief Justice Moore discusses Ten Commandments

MONTGOMERY – Earlier, he had not answered reporters’ questions concerning the monument because the case was still waiting to go before the 11th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Now that they have ruled, Alabama’s Chief Justice has the ability to speak freely concerning the truth of the situation.

According to an AP story by Phil Rawls, the Chief Justice stated, “I submit just because I’m offended or anybody else is offended at a monument or a statue doesn’t (See“Falsely intoning,” page 3)

The place to be August 10!

This will again be held all day and evening Saturday in the all-White east Tennessee Smoky Mountains, about 45 minutes from Knoxville. Seating is limited, and hotel or cabin rentals will book up, so register now.

This will be an inspiring gathering with fellowship among dedicated activists in the beautiful mountains. Like last year, it’s no hand-wringing meet-eat-and-retreat but a practical politics seminar on winning.

Seminar leaders include topnotch pro-White activists David Duke, Sam Dickson, Paul Fromm, Matthew Parrott, Horus the Avenger, Truck Roy, and Stormfront Chief of Staff Jack Boot.

Registration is $85, which includes two catered meals, lunch and dinner, along with refreshments.

Once again this year, an informal nature walk through the Smokies, led by David Duke, will follow Sunday, along with other activities for those staying over.

You can register online by credit card at stormfront.org. Or mail your registration fee to Stormfront, P. O. Box 6637, West Palm Beach, FL 33405.

The discussion thread regarding this event can be found at www.stormfront.org.

HERE’S WHAT WAS IGNORED OR MISREPORTED ELSEWHERE:

Gone with the wind

TEXAS Governor Rick Perry will visit Israel in October, a move that signals to the political world he is seriously considering another presidential run in 2016. Why does groveling before the little rogue, apartheid State now in occupation of Palestine make him qualified for Jewnighted States’ chief straw man? Because no Texan is proposing to relocate offshore and offer himself as the Confederate-States-of-America-in-Exile’s second President.

FIVE Palestinian journalists were injured July 17 as Israeli forces dispersed a peaceful demonstration at Qalandiya checkpoint. Israelis fired rubber-coated steel bullets, stun grenades and tear gas, injuring Nida Younis, Naela Araj, Mufeed Abu Hasna, Omar Abdul-Raziq and the Palestinian Journalists’ Syndicate chief, Abdel Nasser Najjar.

A LONG awaited study by the World Health Organization and the Ministry of Health in Iraq on congenital birth defects is extensive in nature. 10,800 households were selected for the study to be released early this year but it is not yet public. Many scientists and experts questioning the delay also want to know why the report will not examine links between the prevalence of birth defects and use of depleted uranium (DU) munitions during the war on Iraq and that State’s occupation.

DEPUTY Prime Minister Qadri Jamil of Syria said on July 22, “All agreements between Russia and Syria in the area of arms deliveries are in place.” Russia has refused to halt military cooperation with the Damascus government.

IN IRAQ, hundreds of prisoners made their escapes July 22 following militant assaults on two major prisons in Baghdad and the nearby town of Taji. The attackers, armed with mortars and machine guns, hit the prisons in Taji and Abu Ghraib on late Sunday, sparking gun battles that resulted in dozens of people dead. Gone is the order that prevailed under Saddam Hussein.

JUDICIAL WATCH has documents in response to local, State and federal records requests revealing that a little-known unit of the Department of Justice (DOJ) called the Community Relations Service (CRS) was deployed to Sanford, Florida, following the Trayvon Martin shooting to help organize and manage rallies and protests against George Zimmerman.

Rand Paul defends former Political Cesspool guest – sort of

By James Edwards
thepoliticalcesspool.org
Jack Hunter (a.k.a. The Southern Avenger) is now an aide to Senator Rand Paul. He used to be outspokenly pro-Confederate. A couple of years ago, before he castrated himself to have a seat in the nosebleed section of the halls of power, he was once a featured guest on The Political Cesspool. This fact used to be heralded on Hunter’s personal Wikipedia bio, but has since been scrubbed. Surprise, surprise.

The anti-White media jackals have taken Paul to task over the fact that at one point in his life Hunter once claimed not to completely hate himself and his heritage. As others have noted, this is no longer his position.

Change

The most recent target of politically correct thought crime enforcement is Rand Paul’s social media man, Jack Hunter, a.k.a. “The Southern Avenger.” Several years ago, I was a big fan of his biting social criticism. I’ve kept an eye on his political transition from courageous defender of his folk to craven instrument of libertarian prattle, disappointed to have lost such a gifted and productive man to the enemy. Like an infected victim in a sci-fi alien abduction flick, his rhetoric gradually evolved from that of sovereignty, identity and tradition to globalism and greed. While he had once objected to the Third World invasion as a threat to our heritage and identity, he now embraces it as an economic opportunity, having switched his allegiance from common working folks to agribusiness lobbyists.

Touché cliché

VDare delivered the definitive verdict on Mr. Hunter’s situation: “Then They Came for Jack Hunter...They Can Have Him.” Unlike Jason Richwine, who has my unqualified support, “The Southern Avenger” has become “The Anti-Southern Apparatchik.” He’s glad Abraham Lincoln beat the South into submission, he’s a champion of the insidious and fallacious “Civil Rights” historical narrative and he’s eager to help strip America of what little sovereignty and identity remains.

He’s released a statement on the “recent attacks,” framing his capitulation and degeneration as a progression toward being a respectable adult.

Our website links will provide you with the background of this story. It’s pretty pathetic, but not at all unusual.

Good boy

Despite the manufactured and hysterical media furor, Rand Paul is keeping Hunter on his staff because Hunter has now disavowed any and all sensible remarks he ever made.

I certainly give Paul some credit for not caving to the media’s demand for a political lynching, but he was sure to placate them with all the politically correct jargon he could muster.

Jack Hunter, on the other hand, should be ashamed of his craven cowardice. His integrity has been ripped to shreds since his lone appearance on our show. By selling out he has disgraced his ancestors. Is it

A Minnesota couple decided to vacation at the very same Florida hotel where they had spent their honeymoon twenty years ago. Due to hectic schedules, the husband flew to Florida on Thursday and his wife would fly down the following day.

Checking into the hotel and finding a computer in his room, he decided to email her. Accidentally omitting one letter from her email address without realizing it, he sent the message.

Meanwhile, somewhere in Houston, a widow had just returned home from her husband’s funeral. A minister of many years, he had been called home to glory following a sudden heart attack. Checking her email expecting words of condolence from relatives and friends, after reading the first message she fainted. The widow’s son rushed into the room, found his mother on the floor and saw on the computer screen:

Speech and religion were already ours back when FDR named “four freedoms.” But he would whip hunger, fear and oppression, abstaining forever from Europe’s wars. When politicians lie, the State bites off what only individuals can chew. It’s time we recovered those powers not delegated.

Falsely intoning “So help me God” is a traitorous crime

make it unconstitutional. I am offended when I walk into the federal courts and see them with a statue of a Greek goddess, Themis, goddess of justice, in front of their building and I’m on trial. Well, I know the Greek system tried people by what they thought, which quite frankly is the way I was tried. So I get offended. But does that make it unconstitutional? I submit it doesn’t.”
Various groups around the country have pledged to support the Chief Justice regardless of whether the full 11th Circuit Court agrees to hear the case. The U. S. Supreme Court is the final stop for the case. The Supreme Court could rule in favor of the Alabama Chief Justice, against the Chief Justice or even refuse to hear the case.*

Some clergy are encouraging civil protest if the monument is ordered to be removed. According to a story in the Tuscaloosa News, Reverend Pat Mahoney with the Christian Defense Coalition has stated, “My sense is a line in the sand needs to be drawn in Montgomery, Alabama.” Said Mahoney: “We’re seeing an incredible erosion of civil liberties and free speech rights, particularly in the area of religious free speech and expression in the public square.” “It appears that we will have at least 48 to 72 hours notice before the Ten Commandments are ordered to be removed,” said Mahoney. “Before this can occur we are calling for hundreds of Christians to lay down their lives and kneel in prayer around the Commandments and the courthouse. We may have to face arrest for this action.”
The Alabama Chief Justice indicated that he neither discouraged nor encouraged civil disobedience.

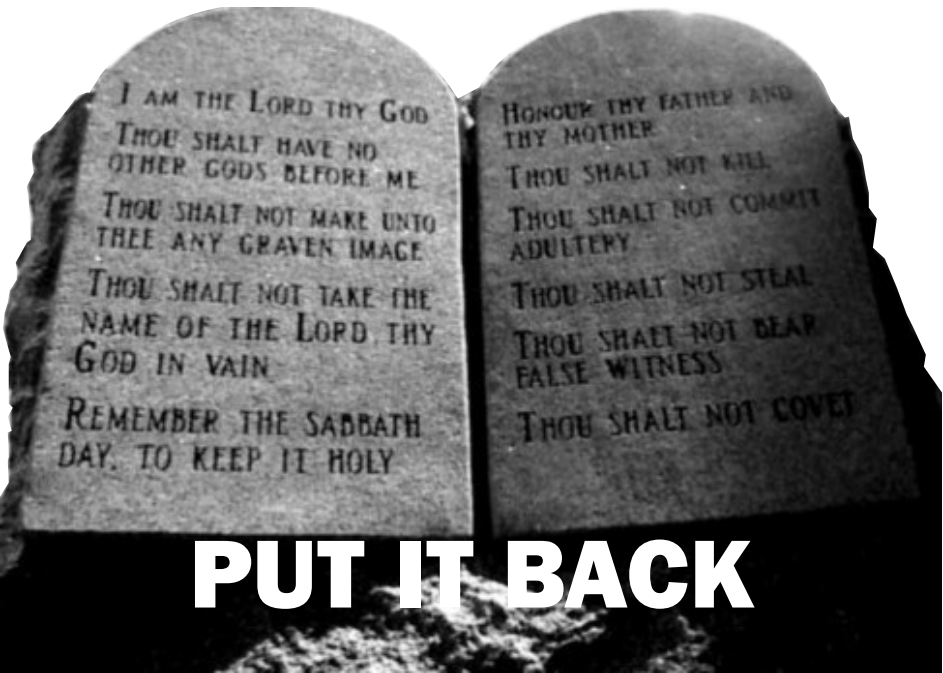

Larry Darby, director of the Alabama chapter of American Atheists, indicated that he did not think many Christians would come to defend the Ten Commandments. “I don’t think they will amass any significant protesters. That monument is coming out,” he said. John Giles, President of the Christian Coalition of Alabama, disagrees. “I believe you’re going to see people swarming into Montgomery from all over the country.”

* The U. S. Supreme Court refused to hear Moore’s appeal.

Here’s the stone that revealed Mr. Dees’ poverty. And what about ours? How many of those Ten Commandments have we broken, how often? Can people learn from their own mistakes and those of Mo Dees, or must they go on repeating them? He says if we’re against homosexuality and the mixing of all races (except the one that finances SPLC’s lawsuits), that can only be hate. He’s for the higher taxes necessary to go on indoctrinating children to embrace his lifestyle. What’ll it be, folks? The vote – the choice – is ours. The time is now.

The First Freedom isn’t for everybody. But you know someone who needs it.

Your “representatives” – forbidden by the Southern Puberty Lechery Center, a federal Affirmative Action Apparatchik and those new voting machines to display such reminders in a building full of judges, lawyers and politicians – have banished the Ten Commandments from Alabama’s Supreme Court now for 119 months.

“The best way to control the opposition is to lead it ourselves.”

The Jewish “Reverend” Rob Schenck is President of the National Clergy Council while the Jewish “Reverend” Pat Mahoney is President of the Christian Defense Coalition. Jewish “Father” Paul Schenck is Director of the National Pro-Life Center. These shysters operate their divide-and-conquer operations from very sumptuous surroundings in the District of Corruption, where they receive the generous backing of gullible Christians across the land. The two-and-a-half ton stone Decalogue seen above, its origins never made clear, was no problem for their Synagogue of Satan to place in the Alabama Supreme Court’s rotunda and remove at will. The monument itself is free of guilt, its message divine. Ten years having elapsed, we want it back.

The First Freedom, September 2003:

Stone too heavy for Montgomery judges
On September 11, 2003, we get reminded – by those who ordered the crime – that the World Trade Center was our greatest loss.

By Olaf Childress

Shown at left is the solid granite block weighing more tons than all those lawyers and a dozen avowed atheists could lift from the Alabama Supreme Court Rotunda on Dec. 16, 2002, as, two days before Federal Judge Myron Thompson’s 30-day deadline for removing these Ten Commandments in deference to his own, the people gathered at their Capitol one block away and agreed it’s time to remove Myron Thompson. Crowd size guesses varied; Lloyd Caperton said 250, the Montgomery Advertiser 400. Here, sunlight streams in from above the roof of a notorious SPLC across the street, inside of which sits Morris Dees, his dark eyes planning the next move against us.

Naturally the appellate court in Atlanta – from that safer distance more inclined to disregard the U. S. Constitution’s injunction against federal intrusion into such matters as religion, which are reserved solely to the States – sided with the local federal judge. What else is new?

Still, there remained one small problem: a gathering storm of protest, people from near and far vowing to surround the place and prevent the monolith’s removal. How to turn that liability into an asset for the New World Order? Federalize and send in the State’s own National Guard, same as Eisenhower did in Arkansas? No, that may not work here. Outlast these protesters, no more hurry-up Waco scenes; first break this State’s willpower before going against her Ten Commandments stone? That’s a last resort, unworthy of an empire: waiting for the crowds to thin, as at the Indianapolis Baptist Temple, before confiscating all its assets and the church itself.

Undecided just how to enforce his order that the monument must be gone no later than August 20th at midnight (Thompson’s final ultimatum), on his high seat he hears on this Wednesday that a huge crowd has gathered before the judicial building, same as on the previous Saturday at the Capitol just one block distant, saying, “No way.”

Protesters had come prepared to occupy the plaza before the courthouse however long it might take. That vigil and its many prayer services – both for the preservation of God’s law as the moral basis of the U. S. and Alabama Constitutions, and for the souls of those atheists who would overrule this State’s good and gentle people – now continues around the clock, seven days a week.

They have come to Montgomery from everywhere, bringing sleeping bags, many sojourners monitoring the scene throughout each night. Others turn in at local churches and residences which have opened their doors for the duration. Obviously what we have here is the long-expected showdown.

Why are we gathered here before the Alabama Supreme Court? Is it to chastise those judges who’ve seemingly forgotten the source of all laws: our highest tribunal?

That, certainly, but more importantly to put them back in touch with the humble people they serve, and the duties they have sworn under oath to fulfill, uttering, “So help me God!”

Under attack by a federal judiciary that has falsely promised to restrict itself within those powers enumerated by the United States Constitution, we come these days from Alabama and other States praying divine intervention in our hour of peril. We are not here petitioning guidance by would-be judges so drunk with licentious power as to have forgotten the thousands of years and hundreds of generations behind these Ten Commandments: rules for good living venerated by all religious faiths. To love and worship God above all else; and respect our neighbor, never to covet what is his, these rules make more sense to the majority of us than raising any “wall of separation” between our own bumbling government and the quick Mind of this universe.

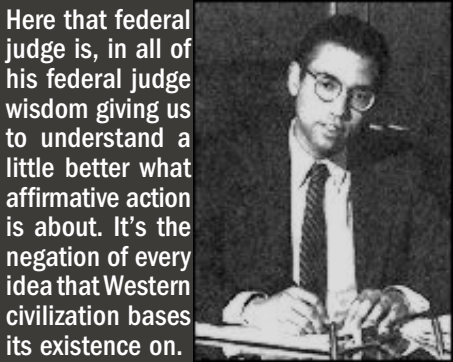

Such ones as are “offended” by a rule to “Remember the Sabbath Day and keep it holy,” might be relieved to discover there’s no penalty beyond self-punishment – the word means “rest” – for working without letup. “Do not commit adultery!” Why not, will you be shot? It happens; but nobody will get stoned for that crime by a federal judge who couldn’t lift ours. Yet, who knows? He might jackhammer it to pieces somewhere out of sight. The only thing we know for sure about him is that he doesn’t quite grasp the constitution, nor remember his oath; which advises us we must assume he will continue becoming a problem for the remainder of his fourscore and ten.

And even a granite Ten Commandments Monument can’t last forever; only the laws engraved thereon will do that. So we are here to consecrate the spot whereupon Roy Moore has placed this symbol of our faith. The media err, as they often do, in calling it “his” stone. No, dear pundits, we have adopted this impetus. It’s ours, and Roy Moore is our hero.

We are gathered here within sight of the Alabama Supreme Court Rotunda from which a fanatical federal and cowardly State judiciary imagine themselves capable of removing, along with a stone which merely takes note of it, higher law itself. Their new Office for Worldland Security has as its edict the removal of God’s incomparably more powerful words from our hearts. Let us pray for such fools as would slide the Ten Commandments Monument into a dark corner, unknowing that they’ll answer for that blasphemy.

We have told Federal Judge Myron Thompson the monument isn’t leaving the premises, but don’t count on determined cowards not destroying it out of sight. If that sounds like hysterical conjecture, it shows how little the media have allowed us to notice the Italian communist Gramsci’s “march through the institutions” toward secular humanism’s destruction of all national cultures. Thanks, Mr. Thompson, for this moment of reflection on the evil you represent. And you, Associate Justices Brown, Harwood, Houston, Johnstone, Lyons, See, Stuart and Woodall, for demonstrating that no one is completely free of cowardice. But let us rise above this level of timidity.

It’s important that we sanctify our cause in time and space which cannot be moved, altered or diminished. Indeed, when people from around the world arrive here each last Saturday in August to remember their Thermopylae of the Spirit, our South will no longer be yielding to such unjust force as has lately coerced the State’s associate justices to mock their oaths of office, falsely intoning “So help me God” – which is worse than a simple crime of omission; it’s outright blasphemy.

While we can never sufficiently thank those who came, and continue arriving, from outside the Heart of Dixie to give us strength in our hour of peril, let us have Alabama’s own sons and leaders show up at the battlefield. The First Amendment says you don’t need a permit to be on this public plaza in Montgomery expressing your grievances. Out of every conflict grows courage for those who answer the call.

The time is now. God is not mocked, not are we defeated.

When Chief Justice Roy Moore emerged from this building to address the crowd of faithful gathered on August 21, 2003, in front of the Alabama Supreme Court, a.k.a. judicial building, he was suspended from office for 30 days by eight colleagues too frightened to resist the endless federal reconstruction project and heed, instead, those 77% of Alabamians who say they want the Ten Commandments Monument to remain in the rotunda of this building, furthermore that they will vote for Moore again. The political futures of Associate Justices Brown, Harwood, Houston, Johnstone, Lyons, See, Stuart and Woodall are less certain.

The First Freedom, October 2003:
Ten Commandments update
...Friday, September 5

Our numbers at the battlefield are increasing daily! Why have the controlled media been ordered to stand down from this, the biggest story of them all? The Montgomery Advertiser – which usually spares a few lines to reassure locals at least that what they’re seeing with their own eyes, participating in, is newsworthy – has turned its attentions elsewhere. The “news” now becomes Governor Riley’s tax hike. And next it will be 9-11, two years after the facts still being covered up. Only local TV8 notices anything at all about our continuing occupation of the Ten Commandments Rotunda, and even that reportage is pretty scant. What’s going on?

You know the answer. More important is this: What are we going to do about it?

The Ten Commandments monument must not leave the premises. Let us get the media back pronto to the scene of our crime, if that’s what hundreds of us are committing here. This is a story. Why are they not covering it? One person said you can’t allow “Do not steal” to remain posted in the same building with such thieves as would, in the name of law, abduct the highest law. Cute, but it misses the urgency of being there.

Our gathering place is the plaza before the Alabama Supreme Court. Who’s in charge? I am. You are. The cowardly eight associate justices, Alabama’s highest tribunal, mere public servants, uppity to be sure, are momentarily hearing from some other servants that the master (that’s you) is just an old cuckold of no consequence. We must correct that thinking. 77% of our people across Alabama say, put it back. Don’t give me this brain-conditioned response about an oppressed minority. He who fears these ancient commandments, knowing not wherefrom our interpretations of law, will be “offended” on cue as the “news” dictates.

The Ten Commandments Rotunda is a public building. Let us in! The monument rests in an adjacent room. Bring signs: PUT IT BACK. Does one need a permit to be there? Yes. It’s called the First Amendment. Have a copy of it with you in case Myron Thompson shows up. And flags, with or without flagpoles as you deem fit. Sometimes the Montgomery Police have mistaken small flagpoles for weapons, thinking us no less crude than the propagandists claim we are. The media themselves come armed with weapons of mass destruction big and small. On August 21, walking briskly across the Supreme Court portico through a narrow opening in the crowd, I hung my toe on a tangle of their cables, pitched forward onto the concrete cracking my shoulder. It’s painful beating on this keyboard with an unbandaged broken shoulder, but the alternative won’t cut it.

Don’t just get to Montgomery for the announced big name speakers. Come for three or four days and nights in a row. Some of us are there with sleeping bags for the duration, and will finally be jailed if you desert us. Guard your sacred trust. Keep the Commandments! Come to Montgomery on a Monday. Come to Montgomery on a Tuesday. Come to Montgomery on a Wednesday. Come to Montgomery on a Thursday. Come to Montgomery on a Friday. Come to Montgomery on a Saturday or Sunday, and spend there your day of rest. Come to Montgomery! Come to Montgomery! Come to Montgomery now!

The First Freedom, June 2010:
On voting the next Tweedle in

By Olaf Childress
Before getting to this month’s scalawag, let me share with you some misgivings about a pair of supposed rivals contending at present for Alabama’s Head-of-State chair. Begging a little “tolerance” of those whose TV-watching I’m interrupting with mere conjecture, they too must admit it’s strange that we keep voting – okay, I’ll not end the sentence there, ergo – for people who promise less snoopervision yet give us more almost without exception. One of the two was ousted from his elected position as Chief Justice of the Alabama Supreme Court by an appointed Affirmative Action judge seated a few blocks distant in the federal building. The other is a son of that Governor who shooed away the feds back when they ordered this circuit judge who later became Chief Justice to remove a Ten Commandments plaque off his courtroom wall. He refused, and by that performance an unknown magistrate leaped to a State’s highest judicial position.

So our newly elected Chief Justice, this eventual candidate for the governorship, next placed a massive Ten Commandments monument of carved and polished granite weighing two-and-a-half tons inside the high court’s rotunda. Did that move “send them a message”? Hardly; the federal Zionist Occupational Government, along with its embedded media, quite clearly welcomed this opportunity to propagandize their NWO’s objections to unenlightened Alabama voters even thinking our moral convictions suitable for a public display. Soon hundreds of peaceful protesters lured to Montgomery and surrounding the high court stopped that AA federal judge’s order from immediately removing the Decalogue Stone. I was there, sleeping bag and all, camped out with a host of others on the courthouse plaza.

Then the dots began connecting. Two Jews-turned-Christian pastor “facilitators” somehow holding “permits” for the whole affair set up their sound systems and fifteen curbside portable toilets, directed a dozen TV-antennae trucks and more media vans parked around the entire block, threatened to have police arrest those arriving with battle flags, bused in Negro jungle-rhythm singing groups and, plain to all who were there, remained fully in charge with lapdog media cooperation throughout that ten-day demonstration.

Naturally the monument got carted out shortly after necessities had summoned us workers home and the welfare queens back to their “entitlements,” an opening gambit by two “Judeo-Christian” choreographers having “facilitated” enough disarray about “separation” for Hollywood to accelerate its frontal attack on God’s law...

End of quote. Here we have the same devilishly-clever pattern that, just like the SCV leader who caused my arrest at their parade, I once fell for myself. I’m speaking of what happened exactly 94 months ago by our tracking, when the Ten Commandments Monument was removed on orders from an African federal judge in Montgomery. It had been set up for a fall all along, and I still have no idea whether Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Roy S. Moore was complicit or simply duped. Somebody with more chutzpah than Moore appears capable of had got that big granite stone sculpted at great expense and placed in the Alabama high court’s rotunda to the almost unanimous cheers of Alabamians.

Circuit judge Roy S. Moore of Gadsden had leapt to that Chief Justice seat shortly after becoming a hero for defying federal orders to remove a small plaque citing the Ten Commandments from his courtroom. It became international news. I was there, camping out with others on the Alabama Supreme Court plaza protesting that decree for the monument’s removal.

The media covered everything in those ten days of occupation by protesters except what The First Freedom noted; namely, that two Jews-turned-Christian-evangelist had secured “the permit” and taken charge, that Stars of David were prominently worn by numerous participants, that busloads of Negro jive singers were brought there for a Saturday night of clapping and swaying and that the monument had clearly been set up to take that fall in the ZOG’s conspiracy against Christianity.

MONTANA:

New law forbids NSA spying

By Philip Hodges
politicaloutcast.com

House Bill 603 requires any government to get a probable cause-based warrant before anyone’s electronic devices can be spied on. The law passed the Montana State Senate in April and was signed into law in May. It never really made headlines, because this was all done before anyone heard the name Edward Snowden. I mean, most of us knew that the government was spying on everybody, but that was all a conspiracy theory until the media admitted it and then tried justifying it on “national security” grounds. So, H. B. 603 has been Montana law for several weeks now. Here’s what the law states:

Section 1. Location information privacy – civil penalty. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2), a government entity may not obtain the location information of an electronic device without a search warrant issued by a duly authorized court.

(1) “Electronic communication service” means a service that provides to users of the service the ability to send or receive wire or electronic communications.

(2) “Electronic device” means a device that enables access to or use of an electronic communication service, remote computing service, or location information service.

Rare common sense

So, basically, cell phones, laptops and tablets are off limits from the government’s nosy ears. Unless, of course, they obtain a warrant. And yes, there are a few other exceptions listed in subsection (2). They can track your location if any of these conditions is met:

(a) the device is reported stolen by the owner; (b) in order to respond to the user’s call for emergency services; (c) with the informed, affirmative consent of the owner or user of the electronic device; or (d) there exists a possible life-threatening situation.

(3) Any evidence obtained in violation of this section is not admissible in a civil, criminal, or administrative proceeding and may not be used in an affidavit of probable cause in an effort to obtain a search warrant.

(4) A violation of this section will result in a civil fine not to exceed $50.

Will the NSA even care about Montana’s new law? Probably not. They can do whatever they want, and they’ll even claim that they’re within the State law’s limits under subsection (2)(d). They’ll claim that there exists a “possible” life-threatening situation with possibility of a terrorist attack. I’m quite sure the Department of Justice will sue Montana on the grounds that the State is “obstructing” their investigations of Montanans.

A beginning

But at least it’s something. What we need are laws like this except with real teeth along with State representatives and governors who will stand their ground against the feds.

“Defense” Dept. hot to trot

The Pentagon says Syria’s war could last for years, and empower al-Qaeda.

whatreallyhappened.com

Far from a foregone conclusion is the war that’s always just a few weeks from being resolved. Pentagon officials say that the Syrian Civil War could well last for “multiple years” beyond this point without being settled.

The comments come from Deputy DIA Director David Shedd, who is warning that al-Qaeda in Iraq (AQI) and Jabhat al-Nusra, the al-Qaeda factions of the region, are gaining influence and could wind up taking over the rebellion outright as the war drags on.

The comments are being spun as an excuse for U. S. intervention, though of course it can be debated that al-Qaeda already effectively controls the rebellion, those fighting forces with a meaningful impact at least, and that seems like a very good reason not to invade on their behalf. But since when did we stay out of a war?

The “14th amendment” and its strange polar reversal

Here’s a further commentary on last month’s “Federal court: States can’t require proof of citizenship – illegals defending illegals” (TFF July 2013, page 14).

Founding Fathers’ reply to puppet judge Scalia’s decision: States are the ultimate guardians of the people’s liberties.

James Madison (and even Alexander Hamilton) spoke to this eloquently in the Federalist Papers. In #46, Madison wrote: “Were it admitted, however, that the Federal government may feel an equal disposition with the State governments to extend its power beyond the due limits, the [States] would still have the advantage in the means of defeating such encroachments.” Among the methods of “defeating such encroachments,” Madison included “opposition,” “refusal to cooperate,” “Frowns of the [State] executive,” “obstructions” and “plans of resistance.”

Integrity at work

America’s fourth President and Father of the Constitution said that it was the duty of the States to obstruct, oppose, resist and otherwise refuse to cooperate with any Federal policy or mandate that goes against the principles of liberty. Remember, this is from the man who authored the so-called “Supremacy Clause” of the U. S. Constitution.

In Federalist #45, Madison said, “Thus, each of the principal branches of the Federal Government will owe its existence more or less to the favor of the State governments, and must consequently feel a dependence, which is much more likely to beget a disposition too obsequious than too overbearing towards them. On the other side, the component parts of the State governments will in no instance be indebted to the direct agency of the Federal government, and very little, if at all, to the local influence of its members.”

An ounce of prevention

Even the colonists’ biggest proponent of central government, Alexander Hamilton, had it right on the power of the States to resist Federal encroachment. In Federalist #26, Hamilton said, “Independent of... the national legislature itself... the State legislatures, who will always be not only vigilant but suspicious and jealous guardians of the rights of citizens against encroachment from the Federal government, will constantly have their attention awake to the conduct of the national rulers, and will be ready enough, if anything improper appears, to sound the alarm to the people, and not only to be the voice, but, if

Over half a million men lost; for what, a so-called 14th Amendment? Please. Must Iran be next?

Let’s roll ’em – back to Massachusetts!

“Remember, you used to be a colored man yourself,” chided the straight Black upbraiding the éclat of great American entertainer Sam Davis, Jr. But such wit is forbidden now. Bill Buckley lost his aboard the sinking National Review after, as a conservative, having noticed how our “representatives” sent to Washington quickly “broaden.” And today, even back in Rockford, Chronicles editor Tom Fleming is beginning to feel parting is not an option: all sink or swim as one. This challenge is presented to those who would have the Confederate States of America dissolved and the Confederate States Constitution rescinded: Deliver the documents whereby the Confederate States Constitution was rescinded. Deliver the Articles of Surrender, signed by the only person upon this earth so authorized to sign: President Jefferson Davis. Deliver necessary, the arm of their discontent.”

Sovereignty defined

Hamilton said the States held the right and duty to resist Federal encroachment with their “voices” and with their “arms.” In the mind of America’s founders, the Federal government would be dependent upon State governments, not the other way around. But what do we hear today? The Federal government keeps insisting that the States are dependent upon and subservient to the Federal government.

Ask former Senator John Kyl

As you may recall, in August 2010, Radical Republican Senator John Kyl had this to say about the “Reconstruction Era” 14th Amendment:

“The Federal Government has supreme power over the States. Any legislation (law) of the States is therefore subject to abolishment by the Feds.”

The last sentence of Section 5, 14th Amendment, reads: “Congress [the Federal Government] shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.” Amendment 15, the last sentence: “Congress shall have power to enforce...” 13th Amendment last sentence, “Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.” It was the “appropriate clause” of the 13th Amendment that provided “Constitutional credibility” to the progression of powers simply assumed by the national legislature while in its proto-Afghanistan/Iraq humor. Without that “power-clause” of the 13th Amendment, the 14th Amendment would not have been possible. And this was not just an ordinary law, it was a so-called amendment to the U. S. Constitution; a permanent change in our National Compact. Thus the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments were forced at the point of a bayonet upon the Southern States.

States need to bellow

Do a little research and you may easily find that these Acts were not produced by Constitutional law. So it remains, to this day: these Acts are null and void ab initio! They are fraudulent, and fraud enjoys no statute of limitations. All of our ills can be traced back to the unconstitutional Radical Republican laws of the 1860s.

the documents authorizing a foreign nation and/or its commanding generals to rescind our Confederate States Constitution through the aggressive use of force, by invasion and conquest. Further, deliver the lawful and constitutional documents which state, in whatever format, that the passage of time, be it 140 or 1,400 years, shall in and of itself rescind the Confederate States Constitution.

Unfree

A nation under occupation does not secede from its occupying forces, any more then France would have been expected to secede from Nazi Germany, or the Philippines from Imperial Japan.

In like manner, the rescinding of the Articles of Secession by the several States is not lawful or constitutional, since these acts were carried out as a result of force. Imagine, if you will, a witness in court testifying with a modern rapid-fire weapon in his or her face! Would any court of justice consider such a testimony to be lawful and constitutional? The Confederate States Constitution can only be rescinded in the same manner in which it was ratified: by the Sovereign member States of the Confederacy. Today no State Government among them holds power to exercise such sovereignty, they being subject to the will of an occupying foreign power.

Our lawful status

Thus the original Articles of Secession, the Confederate States Government and thereby the Confederate States of America, remain valid and stand as they were from their beginning, a rightfully free and independent nation suffering under occupation, subjugation and cultural genocide. What is needed to correct this status is the liberation of the Confederate States of America and the filling of the now vacant but valid seats in the Confederate States Government according to an already valid Constitution. How is that so difficult to see?

If the United States were today under a similar occupation by Imperial Japan, would the entire world comprehend? Yet because the issue is the Confederate States, even our own people cannot see the truth! We seceded the first time as voluntary members of their union, but this is no longer the case.

God Save the Confederacy!

The unearthly eclipse

By Nancy Hitt
hunleyhitt@earthlink.net

In late January, 1945, during the Ardennes offensive, the Germans having successfully captured secret British military documents and maps, translated into German they were forwarded through the military hierarchy to Adolf Hitler. Dated November 10, 1944, these documents were secured in Hitler’s headquarters.

The Last Battle, by Cornelius Ryan, is about the Berlin of April, 1945, and how those captured documents led to actions taken by both the allied and German military with dreadful consequences for the citizens of that shell-shocked city.

A writer who was there

The author, Cornelius Ryan, was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1920 and became an American citizen in 1951. Ryan began his career as a war correspondent in 1943 and covered the entire European war up to the fall of Berlin. He began working on The Last Battle in 1959 and had it published in 1966. Ryan also wrote The Longest Day.

The Last Battle covers the haggling that took place among British and American military officers and politicians as their forces reached within striking distance of Berlin at the Elbe River west of the city. The Western allies had raced toward Berlin and reached the Elbe fighting skirmishes against retreating or surrendering German troops, while the Soviets were arming an enormous military force east of Berlin at the Oder River.

By 1945, the German forces were much reduced in numbers and ammunition. Fortifications around Berlin had never been completed. Old men and very young boys were called up to prepare for the desperate struggle to save Berlin.

Hitler placed a well-regarded defensive tactician in command of the remaining German forces facing the massive Soviet machine at the Oder River. This man was General Gotthard Heinrici. He had been presented with an impossible task.

Ominous portents

An eclipse can mean the blotted out sun or moon, a natural but rare occurrence. Other meanings of the word eclipse are obliteration, annihilation or eradication, and these definitions comport with the contents of those captured secret documents code-named Operation Eclipse: the allied plans for a postwar Germany.

The allies had agreed to carve Germany up after its conquest and give portions of that sovereign nation to each of the allied countries. Operation Eclipse planned to allocate all of central Germany to the Soviet Bolsheviks. This area assigned to Soviet control lay between the Oder River in the east and to the Elbe River in the west, thus surrounding the city of Berlin. That city was also forecast to be divided into four allied-held sections.

With this understanding of Germany’s future written in black and white, the German leadership resolved never to capitulate. Their fellow citizens would not be made slaves of their enemies, the Jewish Bolsheviks. Germans were encouraged to fight to the last man.

When the Supreme Allied Commander, General Dwight Eisenhower, called a halt to the allied advance on Berlin in spite of the fact that they had successfully crossed the Elbe River, this allowed the Soviets to capture Berlin from bridgeheads on the Oder River.

Why did Eisenhower halt his prepared and anxious troops in an area west of Berlin at the Elbe River? Eisenhower had to be aware of the bestial treatment that the Soviets had meted out to the thousands of refugees rushing westward to surrender to the allies.

Eisenhower’s inhumane decision to hold back at the Elbe River allowed those Bolshevik monsters to blast Berlin to ashes, killing thousands of soldiers and civilians while treating women as their spoils of war. Perhaps as many as 100,000 girls and women were repeatedly raped during and after the collapse of Berlin on May 2, 1945. Unknown numbers of them committed suicide rather than be molested or tortured.

Undoubtedly, Eisenhower was privy to the postwar plans for Germany contained in that British secret Eclipse Operation report. The old “war-whore” Winston Churchill even urged Eisenhower to move out and capture Berlin.

Berlin holocausted: Seen here is the Reichshauptstadt risen from its ashes, no thanks to all those foreigners having rushed back in to take advantage of the industrious Germans. Six million holocaust survivors with outstretched palms are represented by these hideous concrete blocks in the foreground indicating their continuing dominance of Germany.

Cunning politician in charge

According to Ryan, Eisenhower had concluded that since the Soviets were to be allocated all of central Germany, which included the city of Berlin, he was unwilling to engage his military forces across this designated territory only later on to be required to relinquish it!

Eisenhower’s legacy was fouled due to his anti-German decisions: his piddling at the Elbe River, his heartless treatment of German POWs and his part in Keelhaul. He must be held accountable for the deaths of thousands of Germans and East Europeans.

A straight look at the Second World War

By Willis A. Carto

The final truth about World War II

What follows is an attempt to set the historical record straight without influence from the powers that be. By this phrase, I do not exclude the influence and power of organized Jewry, which is heavily involved in the sad history of the Aryan West. Further, I believe that liberals who do not recognize this influence are a part, knowing it or not, of the cosmopolitan array dedicated to exterminating our race forever.

It is now 67 years after the holocaust known as World War II. Perhaps it is time to look at it truthfully. America is in big trouble. The unpayable national debt is only a small part of it. Fact is, the White world is in big trouble. Not only America, but Europe – the homeland of the White race – is facing mortal danger. It’s life or death for the White race – the race that for all its faults created Western civilization.

The so-called victors of World War II won that costly struggle for the survival of Stalinist Russia and killed the very movement in Europe that was specifically dedicated to – and was accomplishing – the destruction of Communist Russia: the National Socialist movement created and led by Adolf Hitler.

Worse, the Allies – Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin – then proceeded to perpetrate crimes upon the survivors unparalleled in Europe since Genghis Khan. Probably three million innocent Europeans perished from torture, murder, exposure and starvation after the hostilities ended.

These atrocities were directed by the Allied supreme commander, Dwight Eisenhower, a protégé of financier Bernard Baruch, known at the time as “king of the Jews.” It was Baruch who influenced Roosevelt to promote Eisenhower, a desk bureaucrat who had never seen combat, over the heads of 1,109 officers superior to him in experience, competence and seniority to take supreme command of the hostilities. Ike’s superior was in fact not FDR but the “king of the Jews.”

The payoff: Following his cooperation with the powers that be damned, shortly after laying aside his five stars, Eisenhower (left), shown here with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles in 1956, first became President of Columbia University and then of these Jewnighted States.

At least 55 million people were killed in Europe in this war, not counting at least 60 million who were killed by the Communists for political or racial reasons in the Soviet Union before and during WWII. This number includes the gifted and handsome Russian aristocracy. Of these martyrs, almost all were non-Jewish Aryan.

The Allied supreme commander, Eisenhower, illegally crowded a million captured German soldiers into open fields surrounded by barbed wire in sub-freezing weather. Without shelter, without food, without even toilet facilities, they died in misery. Civilians who tried to feed them were shot, on direct orders from Ike.

Of course, Wehrmacht soldiers who surrendered to the Russians fared as badly – most died in Siberia or were tortured. The Soviet Union never signed the Geneva Conventions. See Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn’s Gulag Archipelago.

American atrocities

Edward L. van Roden served in WW II as chief of the Military Justice Division for the European theater. He was appointed in 1948 to an extraordinary commission charged with investigating the claims of abuse during U. S. trials in Germany. Here is an excerpt of what van Roden wrote:

“American investigators at the U. S. court in Dachau, Germany used the following methods to obtain confessions: Beatings and brutal kickings. Knocking out teeth and breaking jaws. Mock trials. Solitary confinement. Posturing as priests. Very limited rations. Spiritual deprivation. Promises of acquittal... We won the war, but some of us want to go on killing. That seems to me wicked... The American prohibition of hearsay evidence had been suspended. Second- and third-hand testimony was admitted...

The mockery at Nuremberg

“Lt. Perl of the prosecution pleaded that it was difficult to obtain complete evidence. Perl told the court. ‘We had a tough case to crack, and we had to use persuasive methods.’ He admitted to the court that the persuasive methods included various ‘expedients including some violence and mock trials.’ He further told the court that the cases rested on statements obtained by such methods.

“The statements which were admitted as evidence were obtained from men who had first been kept in solitary confinement for three, four and five months. They were confined between four walls, with no windows and no opportunity of exercise. Two meals a day were shoved in to them through a slot in the door. They were not allowed to talk to anyone. They had no communication with their families or any minister or priest during that time...”

How to start the revolution

By Gregory Kay
gregmkay@yahoo.com

Unless you’ve been living in a cave somewhere, I don’t have to tell you what’s going on with the United States Government; they’re watching our every move. The NSA is monitoring all phone calls and emails; the IRS is deliberately interfering with conservative (and pseudo-conservative) organizations, collecting our medical records and either leaking or selling much of that information to corporations and leftist groups. The Post Office is monitoring every single piece of snail mail, while Obama’s new Consumer Financial Protection Bureau keeps track of all bank accounts, mortgages and loans, checks written and every credit and debit card transaction. We’re under surveillance constantly and there’s nothing anyone can do about it. Right?

Wrong.

Our turn

There is something we can do to protect our privacy; several things actually, both defensively, and, much to many people’s surprise, offensively. After all, defense never won a war, yet that’s how we fight. Understand this: I am not a lawyer, and the legality of some of the things I’m going to list may be highly questionable. I’m not suggesting you do any of this; this article is for informational purposes only, and I highly recommend checking your Federal, State, and local laws before trying any of these methods. That being said, monkey-wrenching is how many a revolution got started. After all, when a government is already messed up, rebels simply take the opportunity to exacerbate that situation.

First the defense

Make all purchases you want to remain off-camera with cash or pre-paid debit card only; be sure and purchase the debit card with cash as well. For private deals, barter anytime possible; swap goods and services at every opportunity, such as, “I’ll fix your car if you fix my roof,” or, “I’ll trade you this bag of (whatever) for that 9mm. Always-always-always barter or pay cash for guns from a third party whenever possible rather than at a store; if there’s no paperwork, it’s harder for the BATF to track. In fact, you can buy homemade alcohol and tobacco (or marijuana, if that’s your thing) under the table as well, in order to avoid paying the taxes that finance those unconstitutional agencies. Of course that’s illegal, but then again most things done by the government are illegal these days. It’s your decision, but whichever you choose, act like you’ve got some sense and never deal with people you don’t know. Every dollar you spend on the gray or outright black market is a blow against the regime, as those missed taxes stretch its resources that much thinner.

Getting off the radar

For phone calls you really want to keep completely private, each party will need one of those pay-as-you-go phones like you find in convenience stores; again, buy them with cash or prepaid debit card (available at the same places) and use them to hold your discussions. Bear in mind that every cell phone is now equipped with a GPS chip by law, so take yours elsewhere with the battery removed to charge and activate it; then, after use at a location away from your domicile, either toss it in the trash after wiping away fingerprints, including those on the battery, or “forget” and leave it on a bench near a questionable (preferably ethnic) neighborhood where it will make some underprivileged porch monkey happy and lay a false trail for any government goon desperately trying to track you down via that phone’s signal. And, speaking of signals, before you go somewhere you don’t want to be tracked to, either leave your phone at home or have a buddy take it somewhere in the opposite direction, preferably in your car with its own little GPS tracker that’s in all new vehicles, while you use other transportation. As for your computer, buy a cheap used laptop, netbook or tablet inexpensive enough that you won’t hesitate to destroy it should you suspect something has gone awry, and dedicate it as your privacy computer. Don’t use it at home, nor bring it home with the battery in place. If you can get a small metal case that it’ll fit in, so much the better; that retards the GPS signal. Use it at the library, burger joint, coffee shop or campus: anyplace with free wifi, and never sign into anything that can be identified to you, i.e., what you would sign at home.

Encryption is good, but I question whether there is any encryption that cannot be defeated by someone with the skills and infinite resources at the government’s disposal thanks to the tax dollars extorted from you to pay for your own oppression. Encrypt something and you’ll get their attention, because it screams loud and clear you have something to hide; therefore, the best secret code is one that doesn’t look like a code. Hide in plain sight and all that. One of the most secure ways of passing information is literally hand-to-hand, in a crowd, on public transportation, or inside the one place where there are almost never cameras, public bathrooms. The flash-drive memory stick, thumb-drive, whatever you want to call it, is the vehicle of choice for this due to their size. Memory cards like SD and Micro SD work well, too.

Such exchanges have become standard in many countries with tyrannical regimes, where information is not only delivered between organizations and individuals, but also to cyber-warriors who then use it for their own purposes. This is also a great way to pass around survivalist manuals, military handbooks, weapons user guides, etc. Obviously you can take a lesson from drug dealers too, and use “drops,” such as a loose brick, paving stone, hollow fence post, etc.

Tactics

Among ways to keep your movements secret, (1) don’t use your own car; (2) disable electronic devices and remove the batteries, don’t just turn them off but put them in a metallic container that acts as a Faraday cage; (3) get one of those metal wallets to prevent the RFID tags in your licenses, etc. from being scanned; (4) don’t use your own cell phone; and (5) make sure you’re not carrying recent purchases or library books which may have RFID tags. It’s also worth noting that the increasingly ubiquitous security cameras and the facial recognition technology that makes them so valuable to authorities can be messed with

EDITOR’S NOTE

Some of this simply repeats those tactics employed by heroic Sgt. Gore, later Commanding General, in Greg Kay’s The Third Revolution (to order, see bulletin board on page 23). “They also serve who stand and wait” makes clear that not only frontline activists but whoever will stand with them has also an essential role in things among Thomas Jefferson’s Vigilantes. Even as our troops lay their all on the line adopting and refining the clandestine moves listed here, the TJVs may get involved with Mr. Kay’s suggestions for openly turning the government’s welfare programs against its survival. “Parental discretion” is advised in reading The Third Revolution. (TFF tones Mr. Kay’s images down a bit.)

as well, allowing you to disguise your movements in that way also. There are too many methods of doing this to cover here; just do an internet search from a secure computer. Those are some of the defensive means to secure yourself; now let’s look at a few offensive maneuvers you can use to throw a monkey wrench into Uncle Sam’s works. If enough people are not only willing to avoid the system, but will actually work on screwing it up, the system can no longer function.

Play the game

Take their money. If the government offers you something for free, accept it, whether you need it or not; the object is to stretch their resources farther and farther. Apply for everything. Utilize the time- and resource-wasting capacities of deliberately stupid and inane questions directed toward the offices of the powers-that-be. Also, while you’re at it, start filing freedom of information requests on everything you can think of; that really ties things up. If you ever find a “law enforcement” transmitter on your auto, take it to the nearest truck stop and stick it on the rig of a long-haul trucker. They’re probably used to your habits, but when “you” suddenly take off cross-country, that will get their undivided attention. Also, occasionally send your electronic devices with GPS locators on distant shopping trips or vacations with friends; a group of people doing this for each other on a regular basis will drive them nuts.

These are all fun, but only if you are doing nothing extremely illegal, because you will get their attention. Now I’ll tell you how to get their undivided attention. If you’re not directly involved in the “hands-on” revolution, every agent you can get watching you is one less that can be tracking those that are. The way NSA spying works is through sifting; every email, Facebook post and phone call is automatically checked by software for (among other things no doubt) who it’s from or to, where it’s from or to, whether it includes flag-raising keywords (the list is far too big to include here, but is readily available on the web), and whether it is encrypted. If it’s flagged, particularly in multiple areas, someone must personally look at it. Now let’s just say a million people coordinate and make it a point at least once a day to include some of these keywords in their texts and emails; hey, congratulations! you’ve just made things there grind something close to a halt.

Confusion to the enemy

Even better, get some internet pen pals in Iran, Syria, Russia, China, etc., to swap recipes or something, and heavily encrypt all messages before inserting them in strong password-protected compressed files. You will provide endless hours of fun for any agents who might be bored. Google search for information on illegal stuff – bomb making, poisons, successful assassinations, the itineraries of various politicians, etc. – from your (or your mother-in-law’s) home computer; they love that.

Periodically email cryptic messages that look like a code for something – “Gentlemen; to Sherwood,” is a good example some friends used to use, or “Operation Hammer is a go! Be there locked and loaded!” – to like-minded souls, or post them on Facebook or Twitter, then ignore any requests for clarification, or dismiss with, “If it was intended for you, you’d know.”

Tit for tat

Or you can get really serious and start outing the enemy. Be especially careful with this, because its legality depends largely on who’s prosecuting, and you can definitely be sued. However, this is the information age, and information is certainly a weapon. Ever been in a group that was infiltrated by an informant? Post every picture of him you can get your hands on, and all his personal information you can find online. (See your friendly movement hacker!) The same for judges, prosecutors, politicians, bureaucrats, cops, etc., that have personally taken part in the oppression of our people. Likewise media figures and commentators parroting the government line, not to mention members of enemy organizations or criminals who have attacked our people. It’s a cold slap in the face for someone who thinks he can act with impunity to find that illusion of invulnerability shattered when suddenly discovering his picture, home address, work information and sometimes even bank account and Social Security number on display for literally anybody to see. This says many know where he lives, works and goes.

And he doesn’t like that, for the obvious reason that someone out there may hold him personally accountable for his acts. After all, such ones make us vulnerable, so it seems only fair to share that condition. And, who knows? Maybe this information diffusion will even start the revolution.

Revolutionary Hungary gains support

Polish youth on July 15 staged their sympathy demonstration at the Hungarian Embassy in Warsaw. Hundreds of them were at the Hungarian Embassy in Warsaw that Monday afternoon in support of the Orban government’s fight against interference by the EU parliament into Hungarian domestic affairs.

The rally was organized by, among others, Father Pawel Cebula, who handed over a manifesto to the Hungarian embassy staff signed by more than seven hundred people including politicians, scientists and artists. The signatories support the struggle of the Hungarian people to preserve the independence and sovereignty of their country in the framework of the European Union even while facing unprecedented pressure from the European Parliament.

Hungary leading by example

Demonstrators then read the pertinent decision of the Hungarian Parliament, which received great applause, and they expressed their hope that the Polish parliament adopts a similar statement. Father Cebula said the demonstration was a nonpartisan gathering. The driving force behind the protest was that if Hungarians lose their right to self-determination today, the same can happen to Poland and other nations tomorrow. Hungarian embassy employee Péter Szeratics thanked demonstrators for standing by Hungary. The demonstration ended by singing the Blessed Virgin Mary Catholic hymn.

“U. S. Person”

By Lt. Colonel Donald Sullivan (Ret)
aloe910@aol.com

Some of you might remember the DHS Assessment on “Right-wing Extremism” issued by the office of Janet Napolitano on April 7, 2009. It caused quite a stir, much like this present interest with the IRS in the media. You know, the one announcing that anyone who was White; opposed abortion, illegal immigration, gun control and government oppression; or who was former military, worshipped the Lord God or believed in the Constitution’s protection of his rights, was a threat to the United States and should be eliminated or at least monitored carefully.

But, just like nothing changed because of that DHS assessment, nothing will change with the IRS other than a few early retirements and a little office shuffling. There is only one way to make positive change in our government, and the Supreme Court nailed it in U. S. v. Lee (1882).

A closer look

While all that is neither here nor there, on the first page of that DHS assessment was this footnote:

“(U) All U. S. Person information has been minimized.”

You probably noted that statement and didn’t give it a thought, much like you read the Bible (and probably imagine only two each of God’s creations boarded the Ark with Noah) or the law (thinking you owe income and property tax), then pass it right by; but the truth is, words mean something, always. What’s more, the government and the lawyers have converted our “words” into “terms” which may mean something entirely different than they would appear to, like, “It depends on what the meaning of the word ‘is’ is,” from Bill Clinton’s testimony before Congress.

“U. S. Person” seems innocent enough; we see it all the time. It’s on every banking application we’ve ever signed, but we didn’t question it. Obviously, it must be synonymous with “U. S. Citizen,” which we all are, right? That’s why, when we read it in the “certification block” on banking forms, we just sign the paper and admit to being “U. S. Persons.” But “U. S. Person” and U. S. Citizen” (or, more appropriately, “American Citizen”) are not the same thing; and it’s just this sort of universal, generational ignorance which gets us into so much horsepuckey (jurisdiction).

“Sign right here”

A “U. S. Person” is roughly defined in the United States Code as “1) A person born in the territories or possessions of the United States; 2) A person employed by or contracted to the United States; or 3) A person receiving or anticipating receiving a pension from the United States.” To sum it up, a “U. S. Person” is a person who is completely under the jurisdiction of the United States government by natural birth or by voluntary submission. Such “U. S. Persons” are protected by the United States Constitution and are subject to the laws of the United States passed “pursuant” to it. When one executes (signs) the “certification block” of a banking application, one literally hands authority over that account to the United States, or more specifically the IRS. Thus, when the IRS sends the bank a “Notice of Levy” on one’s account, they are not stealing the account holder’s money; they are merely putting in a claim on that which has already been voluntarily surrendered to them. One may say, “It works out the same regardless”; but at least the non-“U. S. Person” has a legal right to make a claim against the government for stealing his money.

A “U. S. Person” is liable for the federal income tax along with nonresident aliens, foreign corporations, Americans working overseas in a country which has a tax treaty with the United States, and American citizens and domestic corporations doing business in the “possessions” of the United States. Thus, the federal income tax is “voluntary” for those who’ve volunteered to “receive or anticipate receiving a pension from the United States.” They can’t even argue about it. This “pension” includes any government stipend, State or federal, like social security, Medicare, Medicaid, etc. This is why I have never applied for any of those. As a retired Lieutenant Colonel I could probably get a pretty sizeable check from the United States along with my social security and Medicare, but then I would’ve volunteered to be a slave, which I refuse to do as long as there remains to me the means to resist.

Just play the game?

Of course, the argument to the contrary is compelling: “They have all the guns and power, and they are going to force you to be assimilated anyway; so why not take the money and enjoy it?” That’s the carrot, the thing I will never do unless forced into the “malicious compliance” role, which I have explained previously. Doing that, I would be unable to dispute the IRS’s current claim that I owe them over twelve million dollars in back taxes when I don’t legally owe them a dime. I’ve never seen twelve million dollars, but it’s just a game they play to make us “volunteer.” “Resistance is futile. You will be assimilated.”

Another way

I’ll leave you with this thought as an example. In 2006 I was given a traffic “citation” for going 45 in a 35 zone. I was “operating” my “motor vehicle” legally with all its permits and registrations. I grew up in Wilmington, North Carolina, and that stretch of road had always been 45, so I never read the new signs (a trait of us “old people”). I was stopped by a retired New York cop who was masquerading as a Southern policeman to be close to the beach and out of New York. I told him he lacked jurisdiction and made sure he would be in the courtroom the day of my trial, so he could learn something.

The day of the trial in “district court,” a.k.a. “traffic court,” not a court of record, I appeared before the judge and answered his question of “How do you plead?” with “I’m standing mute, your Honor, and objecting to the jurisdiction of this court.” After telling me he had read my “pleadings,” one an objection to jurisdiction (ticketed on a U. S. highway, in town) and the other a demand for dismissal, he told me he was a visiting, part-time judge, a law professor at NC State College in his real life and that he completely understood my statements of fact.

Nothing personal

He then asked me: “It said on your pleadings that you are a retired Lieutenant Colonel. If so, then you are receiving a pension, correct?” I informed him that was incorrect, that I had never applied for my pension. He then asked, “How long were you in the military?” to which I responded, “23 years.” “Then,” he said, “you anticipate receiving a pension?” I responded, “No, Sir. I do not intend to draw my pension or social security, and have rescinded my SSN.”

Truth at last

The judge then dismissed my case. He knew! He got it! He understood that I was not a “U. S. Person” and his court could not attach jurisdiction using that angle. A small victory, but what a rush! I smiled at the ex-New York cop on the way out.

Saudia threatened with New York ban over Israeli policy

By Courtney Trenwith

uruknet.info

Saudi Arabian Airlines has been threatened with expulsion from New York’s John F. Kennedy Airport because it refuses to sell tickets to Israeli-passport holders.

The New York City Public Advocate, who acts as an ombudsman, said the discrimination breached federal U. S. law and unless the airline changed its policy he would move to have it banned from U. S. airports.

“Saudi Arabian Airlines uses U. S. airports and yet bans Israeli citizens from being able to fly on their airline,” Bill de Blasio was quoted as saying in local media.

The usual treatment

“[If the airline does not change its policy] we will act to make sure they’re excluded from United States airports, starting with JFK.”

U. S. federal law states that an “air carrier or foreign air carrier may not subject a person in air transportation to discrimination on the basis of race, color, national origin, religion, sex or ancestry.”

De Blasio said the Saudia policy also was illegal under New York State legislation.

He had written to the airline, Saudi Arabia’s national carrier, warning that unless Israelis were allowed to fly on its planes he would seek to have the airline expelled from U. S. airports.

De Blasio said his office had investigated the airline after complaints from New York Israelis.

Jewish mediacracy losing credibility

British Respect Party MP George Galloway says Western media channels like the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), Fox News or Sky News cannot be trusted.

Who needs ’em?

While talking to a guest caller and viewer on Press TV’s weekly debate program Comment, Galloway said, “No one in the right mind trusts Fox News or CNN or the BBC or Sky News. No one in the right mind trusts them because they reflect the point of view of the regime that pays them, whether a person in the case of Mr. Murdoch [News Corporation CEO] or

It is the second time Saudia’s policy towards Israelis has caused anger in the U. S., which is the Jewish State’s closest ally.

U. S. rules for all

In 2011, the American Jewish community protested against the alliance between Saudia and American carrier Delta based on its rumored policy not to allow Israeli passport holders on board.

De Blasio said while the discriminatory policy was only a rumor in 2011, it was now clearly official.

“It’s quite formal now. You can see with your own eyes on their website,” he told The Algemeiner newspaper.

“And by now making it official they violate our laws. We need to make sure they are excluded from the American market or they change their policy and act according to our laws.”

This comes as Press TV and other Iranian satellite channels have been taken off the air regardless of mutual contracts and agreements in several Western countries including Britain, France, Germany and Spain.

Game is up

Galloway condemned the media ban on Iranian channels and said they cannot be closed down, as we are living in the 21st century now. Galloway said millions of viewers watch the news channel weekly via phone, internet and soon they will be able to watch the channel via a new satellite link.

Forty-four people killed in terrorist attacks across Iraq

When the District of Corruption fomented Iraqi President Saddam Hussein’s unsuccessful invasion of Iran in an attempt to reinstall the U. S. puppet government there, Iraq itself was an orderly, modern and prosperous State.

presstv.ir
Forty-four people have been killed in Iraq as the country is rocked by a fresh wave of militancy, including two bomb attacks near Sunni mosques in Baghdad.
In the deadliest incident, a bomber attacked Khalid Bin al-Waleed Mosque in Dora neighborhood in the south of the capital late on July 13, leaving 16 people dead, Reuters reported.

Continuous mayhem
In the south of the city, nine people were killed when a roadside bomb exploded near a café in the Dura area.

An Iraqi soldier inspects the wreck of a car used in a bomb attack in the northern Iraqi city of Kirkuk.
In western Baghdad, seven people were killed when an explosive-laden car detonated near the Mulla Hwesh Mosque in Hay al-Jamia district.
Elsewhere, a car packed with explosives detonated near a funeral tent in Zahra village of Baqouba, a city located about 50 km (30 miles) northeast of Baghdad. Four to thousands if the ones from the Balkans and North Africa are counted.

Desperados
“The scale of this is completely different from what we’ve experienced in the past with Afghanistan, Pakistan, with Yemen and Somalia,” de Kerchove said.
Olsen had earlier warned that these fighters will finally return to the U. S. and Europe to pose a great threat in the West.
“The concern going forward from a threat perspective is there are individuals traveling to Syria, becoming further radicalized, becoming trained and then returning as part of really a global jihadist movement to Western Europe and, potentially, to the United States,” Olsen said on July 18.

policemen and a civilian died in the explosion, AFP reported.
In Madain, south of Baghdad, a roadside bomb killed two people and wounded at least seven.
In a separate incident, a roadside bomb in the Shia-majority city of Muqdadiyah killed two people and wounded five. Minutes later a second explosion ripped through the crowd who had gathered at the scene, wounding four others.
Meanwhile, gunmen killed a shop owner in Baqouba and an army officer in the northern city of Mosul.
A soldier was also gunned down and another wounded in the northern city of Kirkuk.

Iraq has been experiencing a surge in terrorist attacks in recent months.
Iraqi officials say the violence is part of a foreign-backed plot to provoke sectarian strife in the country.

Number of British troops considering suicide on the rise

presstv.ir
The BBC’s Panorama program has learned 21 serving troopers killed themselves last year, along with 29 veterans. This was while the British military’s death toll in Afghanistan reached 44, of whom 40 died in action.
The Ministry of Defense has confirmed that seven serving soldiers killed themselves in 2012 and a further 14 died in suspected suicides, although inquests have not yet been held.
A total of 40 British troops died in action in Afghanistan in the same period, while serving as part of a decade-long British deployment that reached 9,500 troops at its peak.

The number of British troops and veterans who committed suicide in 2012 has surpassed the number that died fighting the Taliban in Afghanistan over the same period.
Relatives of those who killed themselves told the BBC the military should do more to tackle post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and treat it like a physical injury.
The MoD said that rates of suicide and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) within the serving military were lower than comparative rates in the civilian population.

Seven serving troopers have been confirmed as having killed themselves last year, and inquests are pending for a further 14 deaths where suicide is suspected.
The British government, unlike its U. S. counterpart, does not record the suicide rate among ex-soldiers.
But Panorama has independently established that at least 29 veterans took their own lives in 2012.
Trauma of warmongering
One soldier who committed suicide, Dan Collins, had twice survived being shot in Helmand, was blown off his feet by a roadside bomb and then witnessed a close friend killed in front of him.

Bloody images linger on
He was diagnosed with PTSD and given treatment, but after ten months the army said he had recovered. He was later released back home and on New Year’s Eve 2011, he hanged himself.
“You’ve got units for soldiers that are severely injured and they’re treated. You should have a unit for treating soldiers with PTSD,” said his mother Deana Collins.
A spokesman for the Ministry of Defense said: “Mental health of our personnel and veterans is a top priority for the government, that is why we have committed £7.4 million ($11 million, 8.5 million euros) to ensure there is extensive mental health support in place for everyone who needs it.”

Students stage anti-U. S. rally in western Afghanistan

Illiterate Afghanistan continues writing the epitaphs of empires.
presstv.ir
Hundreds of angry students have staged a massive rally in the central-western province of Ghour, calling on the Afghan government to cancel a planned security deal with the United States.
Local Afghan security officials say a large number of protestors poured onto streets of the city of Cheghcheran, chanting anti-American slogans and torching American flags and effigies of U. S. President Barack Obama.

Anger against occupiers
Eyewitnesses say things turned violent after the furious demonstrators marched towards the camp of Spanish troops in the area and set fire to a number of tents. At least three protesters were injured in the violent clashes with Afghan security forces.
The demonstrators said a security treaty between Washington and Kabul will pave the way for a prolonged U. S. military presence in Afghanistan.

Washington had promised to withdraw all combat forces from Afghanistan by 2014. However, it has been locked in tricky negotiations with Kabul over a strategic partnership beyond 2014.

Unpopular offer
In May, Afghan President Hamid Karzai said his government was ready to let the U. S. set up nine bases across Afghanistan after most foreign troops withdraw in 2014.
Many Afghans believe that the U. S. is envisaging permanent military bases there.
Afghan political groups have warned that things will get worse should the U. S. set up permanent military bases in Afghanistan.
Afghan political figures have also heaped scorn on the U.S.-led forces for committing unforgivable crimes against Afghan women and children since

Afghan protesters burn a U. S. flag during an anti-U. S. demonstration in Jalalabad invading the country in 2001.
Thousands of Afghan civilians, including a large number of women and children, have been killed during night raids by foreign forces and CIA-run assassination drone strikes.
The increasing number of casualties in Afghanistan has caused widespread anger against the U. S. and other NATO member States.

U. S. military tracks GMO campaigners and scientists

sustainablepulse.com
The largest German daily newspaper Süddeutsche Zeitung on July 13 published a shocking article that reveals how Monsanto, the U. S. Military and the U. S. government track both anti-GMO campaigners and independent scientists who study the dangers of GMOs.

Skeptics far and wide

In a very detailed article the Süddeutsche Zeitung journalists reveal information on how the U. S. Government “advances the interests of their corporations” using Monsanto as an example.

The article states: “It is noticeable that those who criticize Monsanto have their lives made very difficult or an invisible hand ends their careers. But who are these critics? Targets are scientists such as the Australian Judy Carman. She has made a name for herself with studies of genetically modified organisms... Thus, the several websites on which Carman published her studies are regularly the targets of hacker attacks. Evaluations of internet protocols

Coup d’etat

By Paul Craig Roberts

PaulCraigRoberts.org

The American people have suffered a coup d’etat, but they are hesitant to acknowledge it. The regime ruling in Washington today lacks constitutional and legal legitimacy. Americans are ruled by usurpers who claim that the executive branch is above the law and that the U. S. Constitution is a mere “scrap of paper.”

An unconstitutional government is an illegitimate government. The oath of allegiance requires defense of the Constitution “against all enemies, foreign and domestic.” As the Founding Fathers made clear, the main enemy of the Constitution is the government itself. Power does not like to be bound and tied down and constantly works to free itself from constraints.

The basis of the regime in Washington is nothing but usurped power. The Obama regime, like the Bush/Cheney regime, has no legitimacy. Americans are oppressed by an illegitimate government ruling not by law and the Constitution but by lies and naked force. Those in government see the U. S. Constitution as a “chain that binds our hands.”

Ratings

The South African apartheid regime was more legitimate than the regime in Washington. The apartheid Israeli regime in Palestine is more legitimate. The Taliban are more legitimate. Muammar Gaddafi and Saddam Hussein were more legitimate.

The only constitutional protection that the Bush/Obama regime has left standing is the Second Amendment, a meaningless amendment considering the disparity in arms between Washington and what is permitted to the citizenry. No citizen standing with a rifle can protect himself and his family from one of the Department of Homeland Security’s 2,700 tanks, or from a drone, or from a heavily armed SWAT force in body armor.

Like serfs in the dark ages, American citizens can be picked up on the authority of some unknown person in the executive branch and thrown in a dungeon subject to torture, without any evidence ever being presented to a court or any information to the person’s relatives of his/her whereabouts. Or they can be placed on a list without explanation that curtails their right to travel by air. Every communication of every American, except face-to-face conversation in non-bugged environments, is intercepted and recorded by the National Stasi Agency from which phrases can be strung together show that not only Monsanto regularly tracks the pages of these sites, but also various institutions of the U. S. government including the military, among them the Navy Network Information Center, the Federal Aviation Administration and the United States Army Intelligence Center...

“That Monsanto is interested in the studies is understandable for Dr. Carman. ‘But I do not understand why the U. S. government and the military are watching me,’ she says.”

The article concludes: “A conspicuous number of Monsanto critics report regular attacks by professional hackers... The Whistleblower Edward Snowden has pointed to the connection between actions to produce a “domestic extremist.”

If throwing an American citizen in a dungeon is too much trouble, the citizen can simply be blown up with a hellfire missile launched from a drone. No explanation is necessary.

For the Obama tyrant, the exterminated human being was just a name on a list.

The president of the united states has declared that he possesses constitutionally forbidden rights, and his regime has used them to oppress and murder U. S. citizens. The president’s claim that his will is higher than law and the Constitution is public knowledge.

Yet, there is no demand for the usurper’s impeachment. Congress is supine. The serfs are obedient.

The people who helped transform a democratically accountable president into a Caesar include John Yoo, who was rewarded for his treason by being accepted as a law professor at the University of California, Berkeley, Boalt school of law. Yoo’s colleague in treason, Jay Scott Bybee, was rewarded by being appointed a federal judge on the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. We now have a Berkeley law professor teaching, and a federal circuit judge ruling, that the executive branch is above the law.

The executive branch coup against America has succeeded. The question is: will it stand? Today, the executive branch consists of liars, criminals and traitors. The evil on earth seems concentrated in Washington.

Washington’s response to Edward Snowden’s evidence that Washington, in total contravention of law both domestic and international, is spying on the entire world has demonstrated to every country that Washington places the pleasure of revenge above law and human rights.

On Washington’s orders, its European of the intelligence services and activities of the economy.”

After a very detailed introduction into Monsanto’s links to the U. S. government and the security firm of Blackwater, Süddeutsche Zeitung asks the question: “Is everything allowed in war? Especially in the newfangled cyber war?”

There is much more detail to come from this landmark German journalistic inquiry.

Background on Dr. Carman

Dr. Judy Carman is an adjunct associate professor at Flinders University in Adelaide, Australia. She has a Bachelor of Science, an Honors Degree in Organic Chemistry, a PhD in Medicine in the field of nutritional biochemistry and metabolic regulation, and a Master of Public Health centered on epidemiology and biostatistics.

She has taught chemistry, biochemistry, epidemiology, research methods and statistics in Universities. She has held senior population health positions in puppet States refused overflight permission to the Bolivian presidential airliner carrying President Morales and forced the airliner to land in Austria and be searched. Washington thought that Edward Snowden might be aboard the airliner. Capturing Snowden was more important to Washington than respect for international law and diplomatic immunity.

How long before Washington orders its U. K. puppet to send in a SWAT team to drag Julian Assange from the Ecuadoran embassy in London and hand him over to the CIA for waterboarding?

On July 12 Snowden met in the Moscow airport with human rights organizations from around the world. He stated that the illegal exercise of power by Washington prevents him from traveling to any of the three Latin American countries who have offered him asylum. Therefore, Snowden said that he accepted Russian President Putin’s conditions and requested asylum in Russia.

Insouciant Americans and the young unaware of the past don’t know what this means. During my professional life it was Soviet Russia that persecuted truth tellers, while America gave them asylum and tried to protect them. Today it is Washington that persecutes those who speak the truth, and it is Russia that protects them.

Emerging truth

The American public has not, this time, fallen for Washington’s lie that Snowden is a traitor. The polls show that a majority of us see Snowden as a whistleblower.

It is not the U. S. that is damaged by Snowden’s revelations. It is the criminal elements in the U. S. government that have Deer Trail, Colorado is poised to be the first town to issue a bounty for drones.

The ordinance, drafted by Deer Trail resident Phillip Steel, proposes a bounty of $100 to any licensed “shooter” presenting “identifiable parts of an unmanned aerial vehicle whose markings and configuration are consistent with those used on a similar craft known to be owned or operated by the United States federal government.”

“This is a very symbolic ordinance,” Steel told local 7NEWS. “Basically, I do not believe in the idea of a surveillance society, and I believe we are heading that way.”

Steel told Reuters that, though he had not seen any drones, “some local ranchers” outside the town limits had. Deer Trail, the site of the world’s first rodeo, is situated Australia, including as the Senior Epidemiologist investigating outbreaks of disease for her State government. In that role, she conducted a government-funded, multi-State investigation into whether Rabbit Calicivirus (Viral Haemorrhagic Disease of Rabbits) could infect people, after the virus had escaped from quarantine in Australia to spread across the landscape. She also has considerable experience in conducting animal feeding experiments.

Qualified to qualify

Dr. Carman currently serves as a director for the Institute for Health and Environmental Research (IHER), a non-profit organization that has a scientific interest in the safety of genetically modified organisms (GMOs), particularly those destined for the food supply. She also serves as a member of the Ad Hoc Technical Expert Group (AHTEG) on Risk Assessment and Risk Management for Living Modified Organisms (LMOs), Convention on Biological Diversity, United Nations Environment Program.

pulled off a coup against democracy, the Constitution and the American people who are damaged. It is the criminals who have seized power, not the American people, who are demanding Snowden’s scalp.

The Obama regime, like the Bush/Cheney regime, has no legitimacy. Americans are oppressed by an illegitimate government ruling not by law and the Constitution but by lies and naked force.

Bananaless “republic”

Under the Obama tyranny, it is not just Snowden who is targeted for extermination, but every truth-telling American in the country. It was Department of Homeland Security boss Janet Napolitano, recently rewarded for her service to tyranny by being appointed Chancellor of the University of California system, who said that Homeland Security had shifted its focus from Muslim terrorists to “domestic extremists,” an elastic and undefined term that easily includes truth-tellers like Bradley Manning and Edward Snowden who embarrass the government by revealing its crimes. The criminals who have seized illegitimate power in Washington cannot survive unless truth can be suppressed or redefined as treason.

If Americans acquiesce to the coup d’etat, they will have placed themselves firmly in the grip of tyranny.

Colorado town will be first approximately 55 miles east of Denver.

Local regulations

The ordinance specifies that hunters can legally shoot down a drone flying under 1,000 feet with weapons limited to “any shotgun, 12 gauge or smaller, having a barrel length of 18 inches or greater.”

Further, reports Reuters, Deer Trail will also be required to establish a drone “recognition program” for hunters to properly identify the targeted aircraft.

The Deer Trail board of trustees, a seven-member panel representing the town’s roughly 600 residents, will vote on the ordinance on August 6. If passed, they will charge $25 for drone hunting licenses, valid for one year.

“We do not want drones in town,” said Steel. “They fly in town, they get shot down.”

Lost rights restored: the jurors’ oath

By Lt. Colonel Donald Sullivan (Ret)
aloe910@aol.com

In the March, 2012, edition of this paper I wrote about “invalid juries” and the impropriety of jurors’ oaths in North Carolina, all other States and in the federal government. I stated,

“The federal Constitution specifically requires in Article VI, Clause 3, that ‘all Executive and Judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution...’ The North Carolina Constitution meets this mandate in Article VI, Section 7, thusly: ‘Before entering upon the duties of an office, a person elected or appointed to the office shall take and subscribe the following oath: ‘I, (Name), do solemnly swear that I will support and maintain the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the Constitution and laws of North Carolina not inconsistent therewith, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of my office as (title), so help me God.’”

“North Carolina General Statute 11-11 specifically identifies the position of ‘juror’ [both grand and petit] as one of the “offices” to be bound by the oath to the ‘Supreme Law of the Land.’ Yet, jurors only take the truncated oath following when they are empaneled, and do not take the ‘constitutional’ oath: ‘You and each of you solemnly swear that you will truthfully and without prejudice or partiality try all issues in Criminal actions which come before you during this session of Court and true verdicts render according to the evidence offered therein, so help you God.’”

Conundrum

I started chasing this oath issue after my trial in 2008 for carrying a lethal weapon into a courthouse (not as bad as it sounds) and my son’s trial in 2009 for “refusing to answer questions of a law enforcement officer.” In my trial the judge actually instructed the jury that they would go to jail if they either “read” or “looked for” a copy of the Constitution. I contacted clerks of court for three counties; sheriffs for two counties; judges; lawyers; district attorneys; legislators; the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation; the North Carolina Administrative Office of the Courts; the FBI; the U. S. Attorney; and U. S. Marshals. I wrote letters to many of these and actually quoted the law to them. Their responses ranged from “I don’t care; nobody cares” or “Jurors are not judicial officers required to take the constitutional oath” to “I’m not willing to make a procedural change which might affect past cases.”

The system’s indifference

I filed a federal lawsuit on this issue in 2011. After over a year of filing 26 motions and pleadings with responses to each from both directions, the judge dismissed that case as “failing to state a claim against which relief could be granted” pursuant to FRofCP 12(b)(6); because all the judges, magistrates, clerks, LEOs and justices had various levels of “immunity.” It didn’t seem to matter that the system was broken and had been for fifty years, or that no “criminal” convicted by a jury and sent to jail had received “a fair trial” in all those years.

Then, last fall, I wrote a letter to State

Senator Thom Goolsby on this matter of the “jurors’ oath question.” He immediately picked up on it, stating, “That’s why I have so much trouble getting a ‘jury nullification.’ I’m going to see that this issue gets taken up in the next session of the legislature.” And he did!

Return of the true jury

On this past June 15th, the Governor of North Carolina signed Session Law 2013-164, Senate Bill 528, entitled:

“An act to clarify that petit jurors are to take that oath set forth in the North Carolina Constitution and to provide consistency between the statutes setting forth the oath to be taken by petit jurors.

“The General Assembly of North Carolina enacts:

“SECTION 1. G. S. 9-14 reads as rewritten:

Judge Alvin Hellerstein has ruled that Larry Silverstein cannot keep double-dipping for billions of extra dollars in World Trade Center insurance money.

Silverstein, who bought the condemned-for-asbestos World Trade Center two months before it was struck by “Zionist lightning”* in 2001, was asking for an extra 11 billion dollars on top of the roughly five billion he has already extorted from insurers, despite his public confession to demolishing WTC-7 himself. Judge Hellerstein, who had already reduced the 11 billion dollar second claim to three billion dollars, finally got fed up with Silverstein’s outlandish chutzpah and dismissed the case.

Publicly, Hellerstein hailed Silverstein as one of the “heroes” of 9/11 who “sought to create beauty out of destruction” (“beauty” apparently meaning “an endless U. S. war on Israel’s enemies”). Yet the judge declined to hand Silverstein the extra three billion dollars.

*When a building burns down in New York for no discernible reason other than insurance fraud, it’s attributed to “Jewish lightning.” Yes, we know, that’s an anti-Semitic expression. The people of New York should be ashamed of themselves for talking that way.

Hellerstein’s private memo to Silverstein – which has just been made public by Edward Snowden, who is still using his NSA back door algorithms to hack into everyone on earth’s private correspondence – reveals an interesting back-story.

CC: Edward Snowden, Moscow Airport, Delayed Departures Lounge

Hey “Lucky Larry”

Your luck has run out, pal.

You are making the tribe look bad.

You bought a condemned property. You doubled the insurance. It burned down. Then you doubled down again with your double-indemnity claim. And now here you are, doubling down a third time.

Third time’s the charm, schmuck.

You can take those three billion shekels you’re asking for and stick them right up your keister.

The whole world knows you as “Mr. Pull-It.”

oaths taken on or after that date.

“In the General Assembly read three times and ratified this the 11th day of June, 2013.”

A beginning

This new law, while unnecessary given that the current laws already require the constitutional oath, is to me a major victory which totally disproves my own theory that the system cannot be fixed, at least within this one instance. It took almost four years to get the North Carolina judicial system to obey its own laws. Most people don’t have the time or resources to spend making something like this happen, which isn’t the way it’s supposed to work. When we point out where government is deviating from the law, it should return into compliance. This is not the case.

Finally, notice that, in Section 3, the legislature has backed off a bit so that it’s going to be a struggle to hold the judiciary liable for its misdeeds over the past fifty years. That doesn’t mean it’s not worth a try to get past jury convictions overturned, and I will; because the jury wasn’t properly sworn and the court, therefore, lacked jurisdiction to try the case. Notice also that the new statute only refers to the “petit” jury and not to the “grand” jury, both of which are required by NCGS 11-11 to take the constitutional oath.

Nothing that’s so truly demanding but necessary ever comes easy!

Lt. Col. Sullivan writes from Wilmington, NC.

You are a world-class putz.

Mr. Rothschild is getting very, very angry with you.

You have enormous chutzpah, Mr. Silverstein. And I do not mean that in the goyish complimentary sense.

If I were you, I would stay out of tall buildings until this thing blows over.

Sincerely,

Judge Alvin Hellerstein

Morsi family vows to take legal action

presstv.ir

The family of Egypt’s ousted president Mohamed Morsi has vowed to take legal action against Egyptian General Abdel Fattah al-Sisi for kidnapping the president.

“We are taking local and international legal measures against Abdel Fattah al-Sisi, the leader of the bloody military coup, and his putschist group,” Morsi’s daughter Shaimaa Mohamed Morsi told reporters on July 22.

At the family’s press conference in the capital, Cairo, she added that they hold the military responsible for “the health and safety of president Morsi.”

Coup d’etat

Tension has intensified in Egypt since al-Sisi said on July 3 that Morsi was no longer in office. He also suspended the constitution and dissolved the parliament.

On July 4, the military declared the chief justice of Egypt’s Supreme Constitutional Court, Adly Mansour, as interim president.

Morsi has been held at an undisclosed location since his overthrow in the military coup. Several countries, including the U. S. and Germany, have called for his release.

On July 12, German Foreign Minister Guido Westerwelle said, “We demand an end to the restrictions placed upon Mr. Morsi’s freedom of movement.”

U. S. State Department spokeswoman Jen Psaki also said on the same day that Washington wanted “an end to restrictions on Mr. Morsi’s whereabouts.”

However, the North African country’s acting authorities dismissed the calls, saying that Morsi is being held in a “safe place.”

According to Egyptian judicial sources, authorities questioned the ousted leader on July 14 over his 2011

Egyptian President Mohamed Morsi (R) on September 18, 2012, with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Salehi at the presidential palace in Cairo.

U. S. reassures Israel of more pressure on Iran

Why those grins and smirks? It’s a joke, right? Americans can’t be that slow to catch on, right? Iran has welcomed the Atomic Energy Agency’s inspectors all along, and isn’t pursuing a bomb with which to whammy the Jewnighted States, while Netanyahu knows full well that his tiny rogue State is armed to the teeth with A-bombs but has never signed the nonproliferation treaty nor allowed an inspection.

presstv.ir
The U. S. reportedly plans to increase pressure on Iran over its nuclear energy program in a move to appease the Israeli regime.

Israeli regime “shoots down own drone” again near Egypt

presstv.ir
In May, the Israeli regime shot down one of its own Heron-class drones, known as “Shovel” over the Mediterranean Sea following an engine malfunction.

Israeli media reports say Tel Aviv has shot down one of its drones over the Egyptian border “due to a technical failure.”

The Hermes 450 drone, which is one of Israel’s primary means of espionage and collection of aerial images, was shot down over the border area on the night of July 14 due to engine malfunction, according to

U. S. President Barack Obama and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu

condition of anonymity, told the Israeli daily Haaretz on July 14.

The U. S. officials added that Washington does not intend to ease the sanctions on Iran unless Tehran demonstrates a “change in attitude.”

Referring to the new sanctions against Iran that came into effect on July 1, the officials said Washington plans to ratchet up pressure on the Islamic Republic.

The newly-implemented sanctions against Iran, which target Iranian energy sector, maritime transportation, shipbuilding industry, oil trade and currency, were ratified by the U. S. Congress in December 2012 and signed by President Barack Obama in January 2013.

According to the Israeli daily, the upcoming meeting of the P5+1 (Britain, China, France, Russia and the U. S. plus Germany) to discuss the resumption of talks with Iran had fueled Tel Aviv’s concern that Washington may be seeking to ease its pressure on Tehran.

EU foreign policy chief Catherine Ashton was scheduled to meet top officials from the P5+1 on July 16 in Brussels to discuss “how to move forward in the Iran nuclear file,” said her spokesman Michael Mann on July 12.

Iran and the P5+1 have held several rounds of talks on a range of issues, with the main focus being on Tehran’s nuclear energy program.

The latest round of negotiations between the two sides was held in Istanbul, Turkey, on May 16. Two earlier meetings had also been held in the Kazakh city of Almaty on April 5-6 and February 26-27.

The U. S., Israel, and some of their allies have repeatedly charged that Iran may intend to acquire nuclear weapons in the future. Washington has used the allegation to engineer and impose a series of sanctions against Tehran.

Tehran has consistently rejected the allegations, saying that its nuclear energy program is entirely peaceful and arguing that as a signatory to the Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) and being a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), it is entitled to develop nuclear technology for civilian purposes.

In addition, the IAEA has conducted numerous inspections of Iran’s nuclear facilities but has never found any evidence showing that Tehran’s nuclear energy program has been diverted toward non-civilian objectives.

An Israeli drone

the Israeli newspaper Haaretz.

The report added that flight operators had noticed the breakdown and decided to perform a controlled crash on the Israeli side of the border.

The daily also said that Israeli security forces had combed the region and collected remains of the aircraft.

“The engine did it”

The Israeli military was investigating the cause of the malfunction, which “most likely originated from its engine.”

A similar incident occurred in May, when the Israeli regime said it had shot down one of its own Heron-class drones, known as “Shovel” over the Mediterranean Sea following “an engine malfunction.”

On July 7, an Israeli F-16 warplane crashed into the Mediterranean following “an engine malfunction.”

The U.S.-made F-16, which is Israel’s latest and most advanced warplane, was said to have crashed west of the Gaza Strip

An Israeli military spokesman said the plane’s two crew members, the pilot and navigator, parachuted into the sea and were rescued. Following that incident, the Israeli military grounded all its F-15 and F-16 warplanes.

In October 2012, the Israeli military grounded its entire fleet of aircraft for a day in the wake of a number of near-miss incidents during training flights.

Spy flights risky

In January 2012, a different type of a Heron-class drone, known as “Eitan,” also crashed in southern Israel while on a test flight.

Europe emerges from the “peace process” dark age

By Yousef Munayyer

uruknet.info
The EU’s ban on funding groups in settlements is a step forward, but there is still a long way to go.

Well, it’s finally happened. The European Union, Israel’s largest trading partner, has at last leveraged that relationship in the interest of changing Israel’s colonial behavior. News broke on July 16 of new guidelines for trade between the EU and Israel. The EU directive instructs “all 28 member States,” forbidding “any funding, cooperation, awarding of scholarships, research funds or prizes to anyone residing in the Jewish settlements in the West Bank and East Jerusalem.”

the situation backward.

The EU decision is as much a slap in the face of Israel as it is a slap in the face of Washington. It is but the latest result of the widely held belief that American mediation is incapable of producing results when it comes to Israel-Palestinian peace. The message from Europe to Washington and Israel is simple and clear: we will not sit idly by as Palestine is gobbled up by Israel.

The global civil society movement for Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions (BDS) has had increasing success in recent years. Boycott initiatives have perhaps been the most prevalent. Divestment initiatives have also succeeded and are growing. On July 16, TIAA-Cref, a massive financial services provider with nearly $500 billion in assets, divested holdings in Sodastream, an Israeli company based in occupied territory.

Where the nascent BDS movement’s successes have been most limited is in the “S,” securing State level sanctions. Of course for a civil society movement to change State level policy is always a difficult task but some successes have come in the form of States labeling or refusing to import Israeli settlement products.

Other measures must follow

The announcement from the EU, however, is an important step in the right direction. How effective this step will be on its own is another question.

If Europe did in fact cease all trade with Israeli settlement products and all investment in Israeli colonies in the West Bank – and this new directive stops well short of that – still, it would make a dent in the Israeli economy. That dent would not be very big, but it would send a message.

Zeroing in on the problem

The trouble of course is the Israeli settlements did not create themselves. They are part and parcel of a statewide initiative to colonize what is left of Palestinian territory. Targeting settlements alone is not the way to change the behavior of the State; the State must be targeted as well. Or, as Israeli columnist Gideon Levy put it recently in a column endorsing the boycott of Israel:

“The distinction between products from the occupation and Israeli products is an artificial creation. It’s not the settlers who are the primary culprits but rather those who cultivate their existence. All of Israel is immersed in the settlement enterprise, so all of Israel must take responsibility for it and pay the price for it. There is no one unaffected by the occupation, including those who fancy looking the other way and steering clear of it. We are all settlers.”

The EU directive is a preliminary step but a step in the right direction nonetheless. While still far from the pressure necessary, Europe is moving toward increasingly pressing Israel. Starting this way, Europe leaves itself room for incrementally increasing pressure on Israel over time to reiterate and reinforce the message that continued occupation will be met with continued sanctions.

Only by pressing Israel will it actually change its behavior. This is refreshing to see, for a change, but there is still a long way to go.

Is Ken Waltzer on the outs; or is he in hiding?

By Carolyn Yeager
carolynyeager.net

Prof. Kenneth Waltzer used to be the man to go to when the press wanted to know what to think about any “holocaust” scandal. An example is the book that was ready to be made into a movie by Herman and Roma Rosenblat, Angel at the Fence. Waltzer gained a lot from his role in debunking the story (even though it was easy to do), receiving attention in the press as an “honest holocaust historian.”

Waltzer teaches German history at Michigan State University and is also director of its Jewish Studies Program since 1992 (with some time off).

When he was interviewed by Harper's magazine about the Rosenblat fraud in December 2008, it boosted his reputation and standing. But for some time now, the only one getting the media attention is Deborah Lipstadt, professor of Jewish Studies at Emory University. I have not seen a word written, nor any kind of announcement from Waltzer about his main project for months. He spent 2011-2012 as the Winegarden Visiting Professor at UM-Flint during which time he worked with students creating their own papers to add to the overabundance of holocaust lore and trivia already in existence. Students were directed to use “testimonies and memoirs” as primary sources, and “books and articles” as secondary sources. There is obviously no need for original documents in Prof. Waltzer's classes.

I have been scrutinizing Waltzer on the pages of Elie Wiesel Cons The World not only for mistakes in his holocaust historical account, but also for deception and cover-ups. Can it be that, from this, Ken Waltzer has come to be seen as more of a liability than an asset to other holocaust historians? I can only say it is possible, and Deborah Lipstadt is one who would make such a determination faster than many others. Lipstadt is like a pit bull when it comes to fighting to keep her Jewish Holo Legend afloat; like a hound dog when it comes to sniffing out dangers to it.

Could it be that she has smelled a bad odor coming from Waltzer's repeated screw- ups as revealed right here at EWCTW, perhaps has even had a private “scholar to scholar” meeting with him?

Imagined scenario

“You're going on the sidelines, Kenny, and I will take over. I don't want to hear a peep from you until I can assess things and come up with the way forward. Because of your stupid “Rescue of the Children of Buchenwald,” Elie may now be damaged beyond repair... and even he is not more important than preserving the integrity of our sacred Holocaust narrative. If Elie Wiesel is not more important – then you, Ken Waltzer, are certainly not!”

In any event, Lipstadt has taken it upon herself to go after the Jewish Claims Conference officials who handed out hundreds of millions of dollars of German taxpayers' money to fake holo survivors for eight years before they “discovered” in 2009 what they had been warned about in 2001.

The failure on the part of the Claims Conference is certainly bad, but my concern here is more with why Waltzer has nothing to say about it, or why news reporters are not seeking his remarks on Lipstadt's comments. Has Kenny been put in the dog house?

Lipstadt has come out slugging as the “honest holocaust historian” on a new “Jewish Facebook” page on June 26. She is listed as a poster on this page, along with Rabbi David Wolpe.

She wrote dismissively of the Claims

Conference, saying that “No one will resign. No one will admit that they screwed up... big time.” This informs us that in spite of her show of outrage, she considers it just a screw-up ... not a crime! (Jews don't commit crimes.)

But, still and all, she remains a “great fan” because of the CC support backing survivors and historians. Historians?

Lipstadt said the Claims Conference funded the translation of portions of her website, Holocaust Denial on Trial, into Arabic, Farsi, Russian and Turkish. “I remain tremendously grateful to The Claims Conference for this and other important educational and humanitarian work it has done,” Lipstadt said.

A neat racket

So the Claims Conference, instituted to provide a lifetime allowance for “holocaust survivors” who allegedly meet the requirements, also gives German taxpayer money to historians for their websites on which they promote a pro-holocaust narrative and belief. And attack those who are skeptical about it, as Lipstadt does on her “Holocaust Denial on Trial” website.

Is the Claims Conference to be a supporter of pro-holocaust propaganda, or is it to be the administrative arm for determining who is an eligible survivor? It seems to me that Deborah Lipstadt is as guilty of mishandling these funds as anyone! However, on the Claims Conference web site's “What We Do” page we find:

“We fund social services that assist elderly, needy Nazi victims, and allocate limited funds to support Holocaust education, documentation and research.”

They have snuck those words into the third item of the four, after the part about funding social services for elderly, needy victims. If it's legitimate, why do they have to sneak it? Why not make it an item of its own.

On Dec. 28, 2008, Deborah Lipstadt wrote on her blog about Waltzer's work:

“Professor Ken Waltzer, who did the research that essentially confirmed that Herman Rosenblatt's memoir was fabricated, has issued the following statement. It is exceptional in its sensitivity and its focus on the real culprits in this entire messy saga.”

Love story

Ken Waltzer: “I have learned tonight that Penguin Berkley Press has pulled the memoir, Angel at the Fence, which I and others have been investigating, from publication. Herman Rosenblat has shared the news that he invented the false story with Harris Salomon, president of Atlantic Overseas Pictures, and Harris Salomon has told the publisher. Penguin Berkley Press will seek restitution. [The second sentence is awkwardly written, something that is common in Waltzer's writing, showing he was not well educated before his admission to the graduate History program at Harvard. Decide for yourself how he got in. – cy]

“I am saddened by the whole thing. First, Herman and Roma Rosenblat are of course to be faulted for making up a Holocaust love story and seeking fame and public attention, but their lying and dissimulating are actually understandable. Less understandable is the widespread belief in their story by the culture makers, including the publisher and movie maker and many thousands of others who have encountered it over a decade.

Creeping denial?

“Second, such belief suggests a broad illiteracy about the Holocaust and about experience in the camps – despite decades of books, serious memoirs, museums, and movies. This shakes this historian up.

“This memoir was at the far end of implausibility, yet until yesterday, no one connected with packaging, promoting, and disseminating it asked question about or investigated it. It is same with Elie Wiesel, exactly! Some actively resisted such investigation and tried to shut mine down. [Yes, indeed, investigation into Elie Wiesel's Night is just as necessary as into the Rosenblat story. – cy]

“The idea of a prisoner autonomously going to the fence daily, every day, in a Nazi concentration camp and meeting a young girl at the guarded, electrified fence who was allegedly hiding under false identity with her family in the nearby village and who threw him food beggars the imagination. Prisoners in konzentrationslager could not approach guarded fences; persons in hiding with a primary family group would not risk detection by going daily to a camp where SS guards were concentrated. The actual fence in Schlieben was right next to the SS barracks.

“So Herman and Roma overreached and actually demeaned their own Holocaust stories – Herman forgot his brothers who kept him alive in the camps, Roma forgot her own remarkable and sad family story hiding not in Schlieben but elsewhere more than 200 miles away.

“But where were the culture makers on this one? What kind of questions did Penguin Berkley Press bring to bear regarding a memoir about a love story set in a concentration camp? What kind of strategy did Harris Salomon embrace to elevate a candy coated Holocaust love story to bring Holocaust education to Middle America? This was not Holocaust education but miseducation. Holocaust experience is not heartwarming, it is heart rending. All this shows something about the broad unwillingness in our culture to confront the difficult knowledge of the Holocaust. All the more important then to have real memoirs that tell of real experience in the camps. [But real memoirs are called Holocaust Denial by D. Lipstadt! – cy]

“I want to thank those who have worked with me – particularly forensic genealogists

Sharon Sergeant and Colleen Fitzpatrick, and amateur Schlieben historian Uwe Schwarz and his associate Jean-Luis Rey. I also want to thank the many survivors, including Ben Helfgott and Sid Finkel, who put their trust in me and shared their knowledge. Gabe Sherman's reportage at the New Republic has been remarkable, and there will be more to say in the coming days.”

Ken Waltzer

Director, Jewish Studies

Michigan State University

Finally, a podcast produced by Lipstadt's denial website:

It carries no date, but would be from 2008-09, or early 2010 at the latest! The interviewer's name was Leshem.

Q. [Leshem] Finally, finally, can you just tell us what the title of your forthcoming book is and when we might expect it?

A. [Waltzer] Well, I've got probably another year of writing to go. [At that time! So what happened? An explanation please. Where is the book? – cy] The current title is The Rescue of Children and Youths at Buchenwald, and it tells the story of the communist-led underground in the camp who in '43 and '44 evolved a response to the rise of young children and youths inside Buchenwald. They tried to protect them; they tried to increase the likelihood or probability that they would endure until the end of the war. They did it in an ad-hoc (very specific) way because they didn't have control of the transports and they didn't know who, or what number, would be coming. And initially they didn't save very many. Many were sent to the outlying camps and died doing harsh work. [How does he know?] But from summer of '44 on, against the backdrop of the Allies coming closer from both East and West, which the underground knew about, the underground kept large numbers of boys inside the camp, kept them from being sent out to the outlying sub camps, sheltered them in barracks under underground control – a kind of tough love disciplined control – and gave them access to extra clothing and food, and even in a couple of cases in some barracks conducted schools that lifted their minds beyond the everyday nastiness of the camp. [This all comes from testimony – not under oath – of communists, Jews, and communist Jews, not from records. Furthermore, it would not have been possible, and also was unnecessary.]

Mirabele dictu!

And as a consequence, that helps answer the question how it is that there were 904 boys alive to be liberated when Patton's army showed up. They had been nurtured, protected, and helped to be made safe by older men, including Communists from Germany, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary, and a Polish-Jewish element that worked with the underground to help save the boys. [You see how they have to credit themselves for the survival of youngsters because it doesn't fit the overall extermination narrative. Yet, the youth were looked after because the German camp administration saw to it that they were looked after. Following the “liberations,” all the German personnel were killed or arrested or were forced to flee, thus the “victims” could tell any story they wished. If there were any honest ones, they were soon silenced. – cy]

China reportedly planning to back the yuan with gold

This article comes to us from the former Soviet Union. Russia, now free of the Rothschild system, will outlast “our” Communist JuSA – as the Kenyan in nominal charge of Change keeps “his” promise.

By Marina Maksimova
rbth.asia

Recent media reports suggest that Beijing is considering backing the yuan with gold. This decision, if taken, will likely affect China’s economy and may trigger a new wave of the global economic crisis. For Russia, however, such a scenario may have its benefits.

But will they dare?

According to media reports of early July, the People’s Bank of China is mulling the possibility of phasing out the dollar as reference currency for the yuan exchange rate, and to start using gold as the reference point.

The reports have not been confirmed officially, but analysts are warning that the step, if taken, will weaken the yuan and destabilize China’s already troubled economy, ultimately provoking a new bout of the economic crisis worldwide.

Beijing’s possible move to back the yuan with gold would not be meant as a strategic measure to strengthen the national currency and increase its attractiveness as an investment medium. Rather, it would be a flaunt aimed at demonstrating to the world (and to the USA in particular) that China is capable of taking the risks associated with a departure from the dollar standard. Experts warn however that, apart from benefiting no one, such a decision may actually have catastrophic consequences.

The risks

Separating the yuan exchange rate from the U. S. dollar may further weaken the American currency in the long run; in addition, China’s monetary policy would become very much restricted, believes Evgeny Nadorshin, chief economist at AFK Sistema.

“The yuan will start fluctuating severely against the dollar and other major reserve currencies. This will affect the Chinese economy, which currently has serious problems as it is: the export revenues are falling, and the statistics for freight traffic and electricity consumption indicate a significant slowdown in business activity,” says Aleksandr Golovtsov, head of the research department at UralSib Asset Management.

Given the current economic recession in China, backing the yuan with gold may further worsen the situation. In essence, China is running the risk of launching a new wave of the global economic crisis, experts concur.

Possible effect on Russia

When it comes to discussing possible consequences for Russia however, opinions differ. Aleksandr Osin, chief economist at Finam Management, actually believes Moscow could benefit from a gold-backed yuan because this would help Russia in its economic relations with China.

On the other hand, the greatest danger to Russia being highlighted by most experts would be an increase in competition from Chinese commodities, which will be offered more aggressively in the export market due to the shrinking of domestic demand.

Christians brutalized in Holy Land

By Mark Glenn
americanfreepress.net

Some 200 Christian Zionist leaders, representing churches spread throughout America, Europe, Africa and Asia, gathered in Israel’s Knesset to “beg forgiveness” for 2,000 years of “Christian persecution” of Jews.

The well publicized ceremony took place under the auspices of the “Knesset Christian Allies Caucus,” just one of a growing number of partnerships springing up in recent years between organized Jewish and Christian Zionist groups for the purpose of funneling Christian money and political support toward Israel. Part of the statement reads as follows:

“On behalf of millions of Christians, we repent before you for crimes committed against the Jewish people throughout history in the name of Christianity... We have sinned against God and against you... To you we owe much... Through you, God gave us the Holy Scriptures, and because of this we have a heritage, a destiny, a hope and a compass for living... What a treasure you are in the sight of our God! You are His chosen and the apple of His eye...”

But despite the fact that Israel was built (and continues to live) off of handouts from Christian countries – principally the U. S. and Germany – and for all the inherent groveling and breast-beating that this mea culpa was meant to convey, it obviously did not “cut the mustard” in improving Christian/Jewish relations in Israel, the birthplace of Jesus Christ and the 2,000-year-old religion created in His name.

Unholy alliance

Besides the fact that Israel has now become a haven for international gangsters – meaning rampant prostitution, drugs, human trafficking and money laundering to name a few – there are other indicators surrounding Israel’s political and social character as well that show she is anything but friendly to the morals and precepts of Christian teachings. Christian churches that were not taxed are now being sent heavy bills. Media outlets featuring Christian programming on television and radio are having their license renewal applications rejected.

More telling though is the fact that physical attacks on Christians, their symbols and institutions continue in Israel unabated, and not by “Islamofascists” (so much discussed by the likes of Norman Podhoretz, Daniel Pipes, John Hagee, Bill O’Reilly, et al.) but rather by a more fanatical sect that has nursed a hatred for Christianity since its inception, the people “China’s demand for Russian raw materials, in particular for crude oil, metals and fertilizers, will be growing at a slower pace [than is currently the case],” Golovtsov notes.

Tentative

“What is not clear in all this story is why China should back the yuan with gold in the first place,” muses Natalia Orlova, chief economist at Alfa Bank. “Beijing could simply divorce its currency’s exchange rate from the dollar without locking itself who collectively call themselves “the Israelites” and whom Christians are told to “bless.”

Pastor Hagee has been an avid supporter of the State Israel since his first visit there in 1978. “I went to Israel as a tourist and returned home a committed Zionist,” he said. His book says that Jesus did not come to Earth to be the Messiah. In what appears to be a growing trend these days, physical attacks on Christians, their churches and symbols are beginning to show a marked rise in Israel.

Rothschilds’ regime change

For nearly a century, since the invasion of Palestine began, Christians of all denominations have suffered bombings, shootings, arsons and wanton acts of senseless destruction of their sacred properties – and all of it by a horde of Marxist/atheist invaders from Eastern Europe calling themselves “God’s chosen.” From the moment they arrived – announcing to the world “We’re baaaack” with all the fanfare that their grip over the Western media afforded them – they picked up where their alleged ancestors left off in attempting to erase the name of the hated Jesus from the Holy Land.

Mimicking the same kind of behavior their Bolshevik cousins exhibited during and after the takeover of Russia and using the “fog of war” as a smokescreen for their actions, Christian church properties have been bulldozed, blown up or burned down on numerous occasions, all of it chalked up to “collateral damage.” Since the Jews of Europe began reconstructing the nation that was destroyed some 2,000 years ago following the predictions of Jesus Himself, priests, pastors, nuns, churches, cemeteries, Bibles, icons, stained-glass widows, were all fair game as far as the Zionists were concerned when it came to maintaining its exclusively “Jewish character.”

Not long after Israel declared her statehood, legislation was passed outlawing Christians trying to convert Jews to the religion of Jesus Christ with a five-year prison sentence attached for good measure.

Now, no longer limited to impersonal attacks done in the middle of the night with minimal chance of being caught, Jews (and particularly those in Jerusalem, the city of

Historian’s ban ends, sorta

Hotels in Berlin are refusing British writer and Holocaust denier David Irving a room in September for his speaking engagement. The 75-year-old Irving, who was banned from Germany for ten years, plans to attend a Sept. 10 meeting where attendees will pay $119 to hear him speak, the Local.de reported July 16. Green Party manager Volker Beck said he got in touch with Berlin hotels when he learned of Irving’s planned speaking engagement. Most of the large downtown hotels that belong to the German hotel association are boycotting Irving. However, smaller guesthouses might take his reservation.

Russian financial experts are cautious about the possibility of the yuan becoming a popular investment medium; they are not prepared to recommend keeping one’s savings in yuans just yet. “For the yuan to become an investment medium there must be fewer restrictions on currency circulation and a greater freedom of foreign operations with that currency,” Nadorshin points out.

Jesus’s sham trial and murder by his enemies) are coming out in the open now and displaying their ancestral hatred for all things Christian without any evident fear of what kind of consequences might follow.

Out-in-the-open physical attacks on priests, pastors, statues and Christian processions by extremist Jews is now more the norm than the exception. A recent case involving a Greek Orthodox clergyman involved a skullcap-wearing elderly Jew tapping on the window of the clergyman’s car and when the man opened his window, the Jew spat in his face, something becoming a daily occurrence in Israel. Only a few days later, a yeshiva student spat at the cross as it was being carried by the Armenian archbishop during a procession near the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem and did so under the watchful eye of his rabbi, who did nothing to impede him.

In another recent case, thirteen bishops from Austria were barred from praying at Jerusalem’s Western Wall by a rabbi who oversees the site. The Christians refused to remove the crosses around their necks, which the rabbi considered “insulting.” Other Christians who have seen the increasingly bold and violent nature on the part of Israel’s Jews toward them and their faith in a manner up close and personal say that during Jewish religious festivals such as Purim (celebrating the hanging of Haman and the execution of 75,000 Persians) they stay inside and lock their doors, fearing their lives are in danger amid a band of rowdy, drunken and violent Jewish extremists.

Chutzpah

One would think that, with all the lecturing taking place during the last half-century by organized Jewish groups when it comes to “hatred” and “intolerance” (not to mention the undeniable influence these groups have wielded in getting “hate crimes” legislation passed in most Christian countries), there would be more concern paid for this growing trend in the “headquarters” of Jewish values in the world – Israel.

With all the fear-mongering to which Christians are subjected on a daily basis when it comes to Islam that is inaccurately portrayed as inherently anti-Christian by the likes of John Hagee, Pat Robertson, Joseph Farah and other neo-cons, you would expect some attention given to this alarming business taking place in Israel. And yet, not a peep from any of them.

Russia stages large-scale military drills

On July 12, during a meeting with Defense Minister Sergei Shoigu, Russian President Vladimir Putin ordered an unexpected military drill, urging all forces to enter a state of full combat readiness on the night of July 13.

Prepared for whatever

Russia had staged large-scale military exercises in the country’s Eastern military district aimed at enhancing the defense capabilities of its armed forces, Defense Ministry said.

The drills, which were the largest surprise check of combat readiness of the Russian military in the post-Soviet period, started on July 14.

The surprise training exercise involved over 80,000 troops, 1,000 tanks and armored vehicles, 130 aircraft and helicopters plus 70 warships, and continued until July 20.

“The main goal of the drills is to check the readiness of units to carry out their missions, and to assess the quality of their training and technical preparedness,”

Russian air landing troops

Russia’s Defense Ministry statement said.

Exhorting troop alertness

Earlier in May, Putin had stated that surprise military drills was a perfect way to keep the armed forces in good shape and pledged to continue similar practices in the future.

The Eastern Military District, which was formed in 2010, is considered as one of the four operational strategic commands of the Russian Armed Forces.

Israeli submarine attacks Syrian arms depot?

Here’s the official story sent out for general consumption. A more likely scenario follows below. Use your own judgment. It’s difficult getting past the disinformation.

Israeli submarines carried out the attack on an arms depot in the Syrian port city of Latakia on July 5, according to a report published in the British Sunday Times. U. S. media previously claimed the offensive was carried out by the Israel Air Force.

Which is it?

The Times cited Middle East intelligence sources as stating that the Israeli Dolphin-class submarines targeted a contingent of 50 Russian-made Yakhont P-800 anti-ship missiles that had reportedly arrived earlier this year to support Syrian President Bashar Assad’s regime.

The alleged Israeli naval strike was reportedly closely coordinated with the U. S.

According to the newspaper, the Israeli fleet of German-built submarines launched a cruise missile at the weapons cache after which Syrian rebels reportedly attested to hearing early-morning explosions at a Syrian port-side naval barracks.

Syrian rebels said that they were not responsible for the explosions.

A spokesman for the Free Syrian Army’s Supreme Military Council, Qassem Saadeddine, confirmed the attack hit Syrian Navy barracks at Safira. He said the rebel forces’ intelligence network had identified the newly supplied Yakhont missiles being stored there.

According to the rebels, the scale of the blasts was beyond the firepower available to them, but consistent with that of a modern military like Israel’s.

“It was not the FSA that targeted this,” Saadeddine told Reuters. “It is not an attack that was carried out by rebels. This attack was either by air raid or long-range missiles fired from boats in the Mediterranean,” he added.

The pre-dawn attack was first reported by CNN.

Guesswork

A handout picture released by the Syrian Arab News Agency (SANA) on May 5, 2013, allegedly shows “the damage caused by an Israeli strike” according to SANA.

Several unnamed U. S. officials allegedly told The New York Times, in an article published on July 13, that the Israeli Air Force had targeted the Russian-made anti-ship missiles that posed a threat to Israel’s naval forces.

Israel has neither confirmed nor denied involvement in the attack.

“We have set red lines in regards to our own interests, and we keep them. There is an attack here, an explosion there, various Israel loses face (and an F-16) in Syria?

By Michael Chester

veteranstoday.com & presstv.ir

The loss of a single aircraft is relatively easy to sweep under the rug, but a major engagement would see the planes raining down like they did in 1973, though a complete media lockdown kept that information from becoming common knowledge.

Israel announced on July 8 that one of their F-16s suffered a mechanical failure off the coast of Gaza. A military spokesman for the Israeli Air Force (IAF) said both pilots were recovered. The plane is said to have crashed into the Mediterranean Sea.

Almost no part of this story is true. It makes as much sense as the story of the American Navy putting 22 Navy Seals on a National Guard helicopter. Nobody bought that one.

Israel did lose an F-16. They are unable to hide the fact that one of their first line aircraft is no longer “in inventory.”

Did Israel, as multiple reports now indicate, and perhaps even confirm, really lose an F-16 and its crew of two to a Syrian S-300 missile 48 hours before the claimed incident and over 400 miles from the claimed location?

On May 4, 2013, the Syrian Navy sunk an Israeli Dolphin submarine. Israel, unwilling to accept the public humiliation of such a loss: a disaster of such a proportion to its citizens has been repainting hull numbers and shuffling crew rosters on its remaining submarines for two months.

As Senior Editor Gordon Duff says:

“Israel has suffered a number of serious reverses of late. When Israel suffers, it loses face. Israel has found an interesting way of dealing with ‘losing face.’ They lie.”

Lost aircraft, or something like a Dolphin submarine, especially during an offensive operation, are routinely never disclosed to the public for a variety of reasons. Informed sources have disclosed that the F-16 training accident reported off the coast of Gaza was cover for their plane lost in the Syrian warehouse attack which is claimed was targeted as an S-300 component part base.

This “attack” sounded fishy to us right away, starting with it being reported by Global Research which is an organization rumored to have “complex allegiances.”

First, these missiles systems are roll on roll off mobile launching systems designed to be deployed rapidly. Upon arrival they can be ready to fire within...well...you wouldn’t believe it.

No easy targets

Second, S-300 components or inventory missiles would never be stored in an exposed warehouse facility where they would be sitting ducks. Each missile battalion moves continually and keeps its inventory moving with it.

Historically, the most effective way of destroying S-300 missiles is by crashing aircraft into them or, perhaps, the other way around.

Third, highly trained pilots, and Israel has them, are trained to defeat air defense systems. That said, the Israelis could possibly initiate and attack flying in at 50 feet. Our sources tell us the explosion in the photo shown by Global Research fit that of a 2000-lb. iron bomb, the standard payload for an F-16B. But while getting in is one thing, getting out alive is something entirely different.

For the Israelis not losing pilots has been a major morale booster for their people for decades now. During the 1973 war, Soviet SAMS over Syria destroyed much of the Israeli Air Force. American planes were quickly repainted with the Israeli Star of David with American pilots thrown into the breach, something long left out of that story even after all of this time.

This was the real reason for the oil embargo against the United States that put the American economy into a free fall that we have yet to recover from.

The Israelis have their nuclear weapons to threaten a Sampson option response, but that would be the end of the Zionist experiment, and unfortunately a lot of Holy Land architecture. But for the Zionists to confront Russia or any major power they have not already neutralized is something they know they can’t do. They have to count on the U. S. to act as their attack dog.

We would never have known that there was an attack had Israel chosen not to gloat by leaking their “triumph” through the blogosphere. The loss of a single aircraft would not be an embarrassment were it not for two minor issues.

Doing war by deception

Nothing debunks the success of a mission to destroy air defenses more than losing a plane to those defenses. High level sources in the Department of Defense indicate that Israel has long bragged of their ability to use “homegrown” ECM (Electronic Counter Measures) to defeat the S-300.

When Israel next calls the Pentagon, yarmulke in hand, egg on their faces, their tone will be more restrained.

Need we discuss the 2% success rate of the Iron Dome?

One of the reasons America has been so aggressive in forward basing is to get their missiles in strategic positions to be used for effective offense or defense in the region.

As the new Russian missile defense technology which will make conventional piloted planes deathtraps once it is fully deployed, the West’s abilities to take land by force without significant consequences will be history.

Secrets of “success”

All planned attacks have contingency plans of cover and deception built in to hide the failed missions from their own citizens. They do this through the liberal use of national security classifications that hide the truth from the American people.

This has been an ongoing threat to American national security for some time, as mistakes never acknowledged can never be fixed. The designation of operations as classified or top secret can also be used to cover up those that serve the interests of foreign governments while undermining American interests.

The real cause of death, if these pilots did die, is hubris. Syria will never admit the attack. Syria can’t even claim the “kill.”

They fear Israeli desperation, and well they should.

Media control is not the same as moral right and justice

By Christine Miller
millercbm@gmail.com

In 1431 Joan of Arc was put on trial for heresy and witchcraft. She was found guilty, and burned at the stake. Her ashes were dumped into the Seine.

In 1946, the Nazi leadership was put on trial for having aggressively started WWII and committed crimes against humanity. They were found guilty and hanged (actually slowly strangled) at Nuremberg. Is it just a coincidence that there were twelve convictions and twelve apostles? Goering had gotten hold of his cyanide tablet and cheated the hangman. The twelve bodies were cremated and their ashes dumped into the Isar.

Fanaticism

In 1987 Rudolf Hess was suicided at Spandau prison. He was buried in the Hess family grave. In 2011 the remains of him and his wife Ilse were dug up, burned and the ashes dumped into the ocean. The stone was removed, their grave leveled and sown with grass.

In 2013 both the gravestone and grave of Hitler’s parents in Leonding (Austria) likewise were made to disappear.

In 2013 during a night and fog action the wooden crosses at Spoettinger Cemetery marking the graves of those executed at Landsberg were removed, their graves leveled and sown with grass. What is the story behind that Spoettinger cemetery?

Landsberg was the prison and place of execution by hanging for German “war criminals” buried at Spoettinger Cemetery. Reading case reports of those condemned brought tears of pity and anger into my eyes. These men were innocent! They could prove that the prosecution witnesses had lied just as Frank Walus could prove that as a foreign worker in Germany he had not been in Poland and therefore could not have killed five Jews there as witnesses testified.

Carpetbagger

But the Jewish judge Hoffman didn’t accept any exonerating testimony, holding that what came from Nazi witnesses could not be trustworthy. All the condemned standing under the gallows at Landsberg avowed their innocence. The last words of Fritz Dietrich were: “In the face of death I solemnly swear that that I did not commit the deed for which I have been sentenced to death. Since I believe that my death is for the good of Germany, I die with a proud heart. I send my last greetings to my wife and my little children. I am ready. Hail Germany!”

An orgy

The hangings went on until 1951. The last seven hanged starting at midnight June 7, 1951, had already been asleep in their cells. McCloy, American military high commissioner, had thwarted all attempts to have them “pardoned.” The German basic law at this time had done away with the death sentence. McCloy argued that these men had been sentenced to death two years before the basic law was promulgated; the German basic law therefore did not apply.

Down memory hole

In the late forties and early fifties the Germans still had enough of a backbone to object to these hangings. Even politicians like Adenauer, Hess and German bishops objected to the victors’ “justice.” On July 1, 1951, 3,000 people came demonstrating at the Landsberg main center against these sordid executions. About 300 Jewish DPs arrived in seven buses for their blatantly defiant counter demonstration.

Those days when the Germans dared oppose the deeds of their American occupiers are long gone, otherwise they would not have consented to expunge the memory of those hanged and “lynchings” committed by the Americans.

It was the custom of the Inquisition not to leave any physical remnant of the executed; for, behind the utter material destruction of the heretical body stands a bad conscience, always accompanied by fear that “out of the bones and ashes will rise a future avenger of the innocents.” But the victors and their present day compliant Germans are mistaken.

Time will tell

Retribution, rehabilitation and veneration (see Joan of Arc) are not just tied to bodily remnants, but rest in the idea of moral right and justice. This idea can not be expunged, neither by fire nor water.

The above facts dealing with the executed at Landsberg are taken from the book, Die Hingerichteten von Landsberg und der Spoettinger Friedhof, by Heinrich Pflanz.

“Fluoridegate” is the next major civil rights issue. Are you helping raise awareness about the dangers of this deadly chemical?

By Jonathan Benson
naturalnews.com

The cat is out of the bag. Those artificial fluoride chemicals added to municipal water supplies all across America are deadly. They also do little, if anything, to prevent tooth decay when ingested. And no amount of gerrymandering by corrupt politicians and the conventional dental industry can contain this harrowing truth from spreading, particularly with regards to what some commentators are referring to as “Fluoridegate.”

Toothpaste you can spit out

The name lends itself from the infamous Watergate scandal that took place during the Nixon Administration years, and is also the title of a new hard-hitting documentary that puts to rest all remaining myths about the supposed benefits of water fluoridation. But Fluoridegate is also shaping up to be the next major civil rights issue in America, as some members of society are impacted more severely by fluoride exposure than others.

Steve Elwart from WND.com covered this issue recently in an editorial entitled, “Is ‘Fluoridegate’ the new civil-rights scandal?” As it turns out, millions of Americans are suffering from dental fluorosis, kidney poisoning, low thyroid, and other serious health problems as a direct result of fluoride exposure. And in most cases it is children, babies, the elderly, the sick, and even certain ethnic minority groups that are bearing the brunt of fluoride poisoning.

Former water fluoridation advocates call for end to outmoded, unsafe practice

As a brief history, the original campaign to instigate water fluoridation policy back in the mid-20th century was the work of Edward L. Bernays, Sigmund Freud’s nephew, who was also the man responsible for launching a campaign to convince women that smoking cigarettes was beneficial. Despite a complete lack of credible science, Elwart’s propaganda strategy was so successful that water fluoridation became the norm throughout the U. S. rather than the exception.

But is fluoride actually safe? According to a growing consortium of experts, as well as continually emerging science, the answer to this question is a resounding no. In fact, the evidence against fluoride is now so solid that many prominent community, political, and health authorities are coming out in bold opposition to it, even though doing so could cost them their careers and reputations.

“I formerly was a strong believer in the benefits of water fluoridation for preventing cavities,” wrote former Atlanta mayor and U.N. ambassador Andrew Young in a recent Government food aid recipients now outnumber full-time private sector workers.

The Welfare States of America

By Ethan A. Huff
naturalnews.com

For the first time in history, the number of people in the United States receiving assistance from the federal government to pay for food has exceeded the number of fulltime private sector workers, according to new data released by the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). Based on the latest available figures, the overall number of food welfare recipients today exceeds the number of regular working folks by nearly four million, and the gap is continuing to widen.

An ominous foretelling of America’s dire future, the more than 101 million people in America currently receiving government food aid represent nearly one third of the overall U. S. population. Comparatively, less than one third of the entire U. S. population, or roughly 97 million people, currently have a viable, full-time job, according to the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), and this figure has been on the decline in recent years.

“The U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates that a total of 101,000,000 people currently participate in at least one of the 15 food programs offered by the agency, at a cost of $114 billion in fiscal letter to Georgia legislators petitioning for fluoridation mandates to be lifted in the Peach State. Georgia is one of many U. S. States that mandates water fluoridation. “But many things that we began to do 50 or more years ago we now no longer do, because we have further information that changes our practices and policies. So it is with fluoridation.”

Fluoridating water a civil rights issue, as individuals do not have the option to “opt out” of receiving it

Young is joined by civil rights leader Gerald Durley in his efforts, as well as by thousands of scientists, dentists and lab year 2012,” explains one report on the announcement. “Of the 101 million receiving food benefits, a record 47 million Americans participated in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), commonly known as food stamps.”

Unsustainable development

What this all means, of course, is that our once great nation, built by hard-working, innovative, and creative individuals from all walks of life, has devolved into one of the worst kinds of nanny States imaginable. Sure, there are still millions of honest, industrious people that are actually producing things and contributing positively to society. But these folks are increasingly having to bear the load of the welfare crowd, the ranks of which are constantly expanding.

“As noted, John Q. Public has been reduced to ‘either a mouth to be fed, a pocket to be picked, or a political obstacle to be finessed, nothing more,’” writes Debra Heine for Breitbart.com about this unraveling of American society.

But not self-respect

Many welfare recipients now have higher “incomes” than the actual workers subsidizing their handouts.

And how right she is, as the average “poor” household on government assistance now receives about $168 per day workers at the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), all of whom now agree that water fluoridation is unsafe and should cease. Acknowledging copious research out of Harvard University and elsewhere that has shown fluoride to retard brain development and lower IQ, these forward-thinking members of the health and science field are advocating for civil rights protection for all against fluoride exposure.

“I am most deeply concerned for poor families who have babies: if they cannot afford unfluoridated water for their babies’ milk formula, do their babies not count?” adds Young in his letter. “Of course they do. This is an issue of fairness, civil rights and compassion.”

from taxpayers, according to a recent report by TownHall.com. These welfare payments, which cover not only food costs but also housing, childcare, and healthcare, average out to about $30 per hour for a 40 work week, which is far more than what millions of working individuals and families make per week.

“The median wage for non-welfare recipients is $25 per hour but because they pay taxes, unlike welfare recipients, the wage is bumped down to $21 per hour,” writes Katie Pavlich for TownHall.com. “Taxpayers are no longer simply helping the poor, they’re subsidizing the lives of welfare recipients at a better rate than their own.”

In other words, the working class is now collectively forking over more of its earnings to sustain the welfare class, and much of this is being distributed in the form of food stamps and other food assistance. And if this trend continues, society will eventually reach a breaking point in which there are no longer enough actual contributors to support all the takers.

“[F]or increasingly more it is now more lucrative – in the form of actual disposable income – to sit, do nothing, and collect various welfare entitlements, than to work,” explains ZeroHedge.com. “For every 1.25 employed persons in the private sector, 1 person receives welfare assistance or works for the government.”

60 YEARS LATER:

Germany recalls its anti-Soviet revolt

“Germany alone was to blame! There can be no rewriting of this history. Never!”

– Chancellor Angela Merkel

justice4germans.com
We beg to differ, Frau Merkel.

New York Times, By Alison Smale, June 17, 2013:

BERLIN – The German president recalls it as an electrifying moment. One of Berlin’s most resplendent avenues is named simply the “Street of June 17” in remembrance. But the heady, short-lived uprising by hundreds of thousands of East Germans 60 years ago on Monday has never lived in history as the more famous anti-Communist revolts that followed – in Hungary and Poland in 1956, in Prague in 1968 and in Poland again in 1980-81... It took 36 more years before East Germans rose up en masse again, and the Berlin Wall fell... As Ms. Merkel noted Monday, the revolt was the forerunner to 1989... The uprising actually began on June 16, 1953, when construction workers in East Berlin marched down what was then

Stalinalee to the seat of the Communist government, demanding that it rescind an increase in work hours and calling for a general strike the next day... But the revolt – the first uprising against the Soviet rule imposed on Eastern Europe after 1945 – was swiftly put down... Professor Wilke noted that the uprising originated in Moscow. In 1952, he said, Stalin decreed a tightening of Communist rule in the Soviet zone of Germany: collectivization of agriculture, attacks on the middle class and the Evangelical Church, the raising of a 300,000-strong army... [A]fter Stalin died in March 1953, his successors in Moscow reversed it, in part because of their alarm that 500,000 East Germans had fled to the West in the months after Stalin’s 1952 decrees (the Berlin Wall had not yet been built). East Germany’s Communist leaders were told of the new Moscow line on June 4, 1953, and after much wrangling they issued a decree that admitted “the party has made mistakes,” Professor Wilke said. That admission, combined with the lengthening of the workday, prompted the workers’ march down Stalinalee...

But there’s more to the story

The picture below is the protest against the Soviets in front of the still burnt out Reichstag in 1948.

So, here is proof that Germans do not just “go along to get along”!

But what do they not tell us in the New York Times article? They don’t tell you that there had also been strikes and mass protests in Western occupied Germany after the war against the so-called “liberators” who were

Joe Corry claims in a book that he was at a death camp that never existed.

According to this DailyMail UK report, Canadian WWII vet Joe Corry claims: “He had assassinated a Nazi scientist with a crossbow, watched D-Day from a house on the landing beaches, rescued the nuclear scientist J. Robert Oppenheimer (the so-called father of the atom bomb) from Holland, attached limpet mines to U-boats, been shipwrecked off Newfoundland, and had even worked with the future James Bond author, Ian Fleming, himself an intelligence officer. The new edition (of his book) has been described by Corry’s editor as ‘everything you’d want to read in a World War II memoir – it’s a gripping, rollercoaster account of extreme bravery and resourcefulness, that also packs a powerful and emotional punch.’”

Aww-ww...

There is, however, just one problem: it simply isn’t true!

There were no such ‘experimental extermination camps’ in Holland, and the concentration camps that had been on Dutch soil had been discovered well before May 4 – the day of the German surrender in Holland.

In fact, nearly everything Corry claims about his wartime experiences is fictitious. There was no “Special Service Unit”; Professor Oppenheimer was in the U. S. throughout the war; there were no British troops hiding in houses on the D-Day beaches. The list of falsehoods is astonishing and blatant. Little wonder that Mike Jones, editorial director of Simon & Schuster, now says: ‘We publish a vast range of non-fiction, and we have acquired the book on the basis of what we are being told.’

The article then goes on to list a number of other frauds whose stories have been highly publicized and later exposed as fiction, and adds:

“After the exposure of Fragments, one might have hoped publishers would have taken more care in vetting manuscripts, but this has not proved to be the case.

“After all, the Nineties were the decade in which ‘misery memoirs’ became fashionable, and a Holocaust tale is the ultimate misery memoir.”

Yeah, right, Simon & Schuster, more like ...lots of fiction passed off as non-fiction, only this time you got busted! Shame on Joe Corry, but shame on you too, for all too often this sort of rubbish ends up on the New York Times Best Seller’s List, earning you and the writers plenty of dough, while being absorbed into the public consciousness as fact, and also encouraging more frauds to publish fake stories. The sign says, “We want coal and we want bread!” (Kohle means coal but is also a slang term for money, so it is unclear if coal for heating or money is meant in this context. It could be either).

Please note that there was never any such mass dissatisfaction and no such mass revolts against the NS government of Hitler....ever! Why not? Because there was no need for it. Hitler delivered them from slavery and misery. He delivered what he had promised: work, food and a better life for everyone!

Yes, there were Marxist dissenters and agitators who did not want to do their part for the German recovery effort, who were working instead against the will of the German people (as expressed through the legitimate NS govt). They got sent to labor camps until they figured out what was expected and required of them in the new Germany.

Jews are silent, the national voice is heard

What this inventor/writer warned our forebears about is the foremost problem we have today.

By Henry Ford
The Dearborn Independent
30 July 1921

By order of Louis Marshall, the American Jewish Committee and the B’nai B’rith, American Jewry has muffled the calculated furioso of its outcry, and contents itself now with occasional yelps. No longer do the syndicated sermons of the rabbis take their course across the country, saying the same old untrue things in the same old insincere way. No longer do editorial echoes spew vilification across pages supported by advertising blackmail levied upon the community. The outcry has ceased. Suddenly, on order, orderly as a regiment on parade, American Jewry has been turned from a termagant in action to a silent mystery. A most impressive illustration of the inner control exercised by Jewish leaders.

No defense

The psychology of it all, of course, is false. Jewry decided that it was the attention which it paid to The Dearborn Independent which gave these articles vogue. The leaders asserted, indeed, that had the Jews of the United States paid no attention, no one would have known that they were under scrutiny. It is a rather flattering criticism to lay upon their inability to meet the situation, but it lacks the merit of being true.

The Jews of the United States issued the order of silence, not out of wisdom but out of fear. And not out of fear of injustice, but out of fear of the truth. As soon as The Dearborn Independent issued its first articles on the New York Kehillah (and only the outer edges of the facts concerning that institution have as yet been set forth) it became evident to Jewish leaders that something had to be done. They did not challenge a public investigation; rather they used discretion, refused to answer even the questions of local reporters, made absurdly untrue denials, and gave every evidence of panic. Thereafter their safest course was silence.

Not that they are inactive. Fearing a sudden investigation by the authorities, the New York Kehillah has grown extremely busy and has doubled the guards all round. Why?

The reason is that there is a resolution in the United States Senate which points directly at the New York Kehillah.

Prominent Jews have invaded Washington on one pretext or another, but only to turn their influence against that resolution. Why?

Intrigues

The reason is that the resolution provides for an investigation by a Senate Committee into certain matters which have already been set forth in The Dearborn Independent.

Senate Resolution No. 60, introduced by Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, provides that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers (a Jewish Bolshevik organization that is the feeder of Red activity throughout this country) be thoroughly investigated. In the official language of the Resolution: “The purposes, objects, methods and tactics of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and its relations, if any, with other political organizations and quasi-political groups, and to make a report to the Senate of such findings.”

Why has the New York Kehillah closed the portholes and called in help – “Gentile,” by the way – to face a possible storm?

Why have the most prominent Jews in the United States hurried to Washington to hold conferences with Senators, their object being to bring pressure to bear against the Resolution?

Why should the American Jewish Committee, or members of it, why should Jewish clothing manufacturers who are the principal sufferers from the Amalgamated, why should Jewish members of the Baruch “war government” go to Washington to interfere with a proposed investigation? Why?

Puzzle palace

Because such an investigation of the Amalgamated, honestly conducted, would lead straight through to the New York Kehillah and the American Jewish Committee and would rip the Jewish program in the United States clean open to the public gaze – if honestly conducted.

Next to stopping the investigation, the Jews will try to control it. That is really the greater danger. The country does not need the investigation to get the facts. Most of the facts can be given now. The country does need an investigation that will give the facts a governmental exposure. But a pro-Jewish investigation, an investigation conducted by elective office-holders who quake under “the fear of the Jews,” would simply be an additional crime.

If the Jews lose their fight to kill the resolution, they have already started on their plans to control the initiative of, divert the course of, and defeat the purpose of the investigation.

Maneuverings

If, therefore, the Jews are silent, they are not inactive.

But, the gain has been general. For instance, the country has been given quiet and leisure to hear what the non-Jews think. During the Jewish clamor, which was nothing more nor less than an attempt to stampede the public opinion of the United States, it was impossible to hear the voice of the people. Ministers who poured adulation upon the Jews were reported in the Press; but ministers who seriously handled the Jewish Question were not reported. Publications which could be induced to act as Judah’s mouthpieces, were worked to the limit; publications which desired to preserve the value of their opinions, did not join the general hue and cry. In the succeeding lull, the still, small voice of American conviction, both Jewish and non-Jewish, began to be heard.

In public propaganda, after having felt it inadvisable to print any more telegraphic news from Palestine, because even the Jews could no longer juggle the truth, the spotlight was turned on Russia, and now the newspapers are filled with headlines intended to prepare the public for a new exodus when the Russian people awake to take back their land from the Jewish usurpers.

We are told that 6,000,000 Jews in Russia are in danger of violence. It is true. Much truer than the miles of telegraphic lies which have been printed about alleged “pogroms” in Russia and adjacent countries. The Dearborn Independent knows that in Eastern Europe the Jew has not been persecuted, but has consistently acted as persecutor. The proof of it is in the Jews’ ability to flee; they have taken all the wealth of the people of those countries. Poles cannot flee, Rumanians cannot flee, Russians cannot flee; but after having squeezed the life out of those nations the Jews see the dark clouds of justice rolling toward them, and they are able to flee, filling the ships of the sea with their hosts. In fact, their desertion of the Jew-spoiled countries of Europe is as precipitate as was their desertion of Woodrow Wilson and the Democratic party last autumn – Barney Baruch ostentatiously staying behind to cover, if possible, the shamefulness of it. When the Jew has fried the fat and skimmed the cream, he’s off. Gratitude and loyalty mean nothing to his people. They are persecutors in Poland. They are persecutors in Russia. They are persecutors in Palestine. They were the arch religious persecutors of history, as the best historians testify. They will be persecutors here as soon as they think they can start it. It is possible, however, that in the United States their anti-social career will be rolled back upon itself.

American magazines have begun to pay attention to the Jewish Question. It is a good sign. Even magazines cannot long ignore what all the people know. It is a good sign of the degree of freedom the Press still enjoys.

Prior to the mediacracy

It is true, of course, that this freedom is not very great; indeed, not so great as it was a few years ago. But insofar as the Press is American it is impossible for Americans to think it will consent to be permanently gagged even by the Jews. There have been, it is true, some rather sad instances of editorial weakness. We know that of two oldest publishing firms, both of New York, one of them published a most scurrilous Jewish defense by a non-Jewish socialist who, if he has not deliberately lied, has shown too dark an ignorance of facts to command the confidence of a great publishing firm; and we know that that publication was made with a view to the value of the publisher’s imprint and that Jews would undertake to buy tens of thousands of copies for gratuitous circulation.

Of the other old New York firm it is known that an American diplomat was advised if not compelled by it to eliminate from his forthcoming book nearly one third of its material because it dealt in an honest, straightforward American way with what this diplomat had seen with his own eyes of the development of the Jewish subjugation of Russia. Had this diplomat been dealing with his own opinions about the Jews or Russia, it might have been different; but he dealt with his official observations on the spot – observations literally invaluable to history. But this New York firm dared not, even in the interest of history, print the truth.

The experience of G. P. Putnam’s Sons, of New York, is familiar to students of the question in recent months. The name of this firm is used because it has already appeared in public print with regard to a controversy it had with the American Jewish Committee.

The Putnams, acting on the ancient and honorable principle of the freedom of the Press, nay more, the duty of the Press to inform the people, reprinted last year The Cause of World Unrest, which had first appeared as a series of articles in the London Morning Post and was later put into book form by the publishing house of Grant Richards, London. Both the newspaper and the publishing house are of the highest respectability and standing, as was also the house of Eyre and Spottiswoode which brought out the Protocols. Major George Haven Putnam, head of the firm of G. P. Putnam’s Sons, is an American, a fair man, a careful publisher, and one who would not stoop to propagate a lie for any wealth.

This is not a defense of The Cause of World Unrest. In the main the book is true. But it is not the result of original research. It does not make those small but important discriminations on which the Jews always rely to lead the people astray. It too often links in the downfall of Jewry those things which shall stand independently and gloriously when freed of their present insidious Jewish connections. On the whole, however, it maintains a correct view of world affairs. But it was not a book on which the Putnams could feel obliged to make a final stand, except as regards their right to print it.

However, a proper understanding of the book called for the Protocols, to which the book made frequent reference. So, like serviceable publishers, the Putnams announced that the Protocols would follow.

Slick

Whereupon the American Jewish Committee – which means Louis Marshall – got busy, and an interesting correspondence ensued. It is included in the report of the American Jewish Committee for 1921. Throughout the correspondence Louis Marshall was the dictator, but Major Putnam’s position and statement of principles were correctly maintained. However, there were personal conferences which are not reported in the American Jewish Committee’s report and there were Jews crowded into those personal conferences whose names do not appear in the correspondence, and there were fists banged on the table and loud threats – “boycott,” of course – and altogether a rather typical scene enacted. The upshot of that passage was that, upon Major Putnam discovering that the Boston house of Small, Maynard & Company had published the Protocols, he decided that there was no call for his firm to do so. And now, in a letter to these same people, G. P. Putnam’s Sons has decided to discontinue supplying copies of

The Cause of World Unrest to the book trade.

It is a rather interesting story. In Britain, of course, publications of the highest standing like Blackwood’s and the Nineteenth Century Review can publish articles on the Jewish Question without regard to dictatorial Jewish attempts at control of the Press. In this country, however, the spies of Jewry are on the alert for every printed letter and syllable, and attempt to make editors feel uncomfortable, as if they were the instigators of pogroms, whenever they present an intelligent view of the question. Yet editors have not been able entirely to ignore it.

Well researched

The reader is rather impressed with one quality common to all the articles that have been written, namely, the facts used are always those that have been given in The Dearborn Independent. Not that they necessarily have been copied from this magazine, but the facts are so well established that anyone who attempts even to “defend” the Jews must necessarily appeal to the same facts. Thus in New York and the Real Jew, by Rollin Lynde Hartt, in the New York Independent for June 25, 1921, this is illustrated. It is pure Jewish publicity, but it must use the facts that have been used in this series. It must use them in order to extol the Jews. Mr. Hartt is not to be considered as a contributor to the Question; the article is mentioned merely as indicating what the American magazine editor is up against – and perhaps it is not quite fair to be hard on the editor of the New York Independent just at this time. The one flash of value in the entire article is this paragraph:

“Ambassador Page, then editor of the Atlantic, once remarked to me, ‘The most interesting fellow in America is the Jew, but don’t write about Jews; without intending it, you may precipitate the calamity America should be most anxious to prevent – I mean Jew-baiting.’”

That is a strange assertion. The Jews must not be written about. To write about them, even with good intent, may bring evil upon them. Not only a strange assertion, but a strange situation. To mention the Jew has always been dangerous to the non-Jew; but why also dangerous to the Jew? The Jewish explanation of anti-Semitism, that it is in the blood of the other races, that the moment they see a Jew they hate him, cannot be defended. Most non-Jews can testify that it is untrue of them. But it is a most amazing condition if even a mention of Jews arouses this feeling. Why should it?

Secretive

However, the statement is of doubtful fact value. The Jew himself should be the first to protest against having to go concealed all his days. He should welcome the use of his definite racial name, and he should not demand that it always be used in laudatory connections. A Jew should not be a Jew when he is elected to the United States Senate, and a “Russian” or a “Pole” when he is caught bootlegging. He should take the luck of life with the other races, and this would come to him without discrimination if he did not first arouse the spirit of discrimination by insisting on discrimination in his own favor.

It is probably much nearer the truth to say that publicity is a preventive of “Jew-Baiting.” People should not be confined in a condition which makes the use of the word “Jew” unusual. It should attract no more attention than does the use of any other racial name.

Mr. Page was, before his ambassadorial days, an editor of the Atlantic Monthly, a magazine which is an integral part of American life. To read the Atlantic is a certificate of character. It is one of the few publications that preserve the American spirit in literature. It is still worthy of the glory of the group that first made its name known wherever sound thought expressed in good writing is appreciated. The Atlantic is not in need of this appraisal, it is too well established in the regard of the class of minds that give color and sinew to our intellectual life. In Mr. Page’s day the Atlantic may never have touched the Jewish Question with even so much as the tip of a discreet pen.

Just the facts

Nevertheless the Atlantic has in more recent years done its duty toward this as toward other questions. As far back as 1917, and that is very far back in view of the crowded years between, this old Boston magazine contained an article relating to the Jewish Question. The fact that the article was written by a Jew does not militate against it, but rather adds to its value. It contained valuable suggestions which the New York Kehillah and the American Jewish Committee might well devote the remaining years of their activity to disseminating and actualizing among the Jews of this country. Even today its counsel would save them from much of the folly which marks their attempts to combat what they call “persecution,” and which is nothing but rather plain and charitable truth-telling.

Right on

This year the Atlantic has contained three articles of value on the Jewish Question. The first was by Professor Clay upon the situation in Palestine. Now, Professor Clay is not an anti-Semite, and certainly the Atlantic is not, and yet the article was received with a good deal of abuse from Jewish quarters. It told nothing but the truth, and it was rather pertinent truth too, which intelligent Jews doubtless welcomed. Professor Clay knew what he was writing about and his conclusions are not challenged by any authority on the subject.

In the May Atlantic, Ralph Philip Boas, who is understood to be of Jewish descent, wrote an article on “Jew-Baiting in America.” He speaks rather disdainfully of publications which have endeavored to air the Jewish Question, but after having thus paid his tax to the Jews’ prejudice, he proceeds in commendable fashion to contribute his thoughts to the matter. On the whole what he says is true, and the facts he uses as his foundation are of course the facts with which The Dearborn Independent has made its readers familiar. He sets up his straw man of “Anti-Semitism” and after having valiantly destroyed it, to the applause of all of us, he gets down to serious business, and says some things which all could hope would pierce the Jewish consciousness to its innermost stronghold and set up new vibrations there.

And in the July Atlantic, Paul Scott Mowrer, Paris representative of the Chicago Daily News, has an article on “The Assimilation of Israel.” Mr. Mowrer has won the respect of students of world affairs by the conscientious ability with which he has observed and reported big events in Europe. In his news reports he has not hesitated, when the facts justified it, to cable a story of Jewish participation in this or that movement. It was reported at one time that an attempt on his job had been made by certain Jewish influences, and it is certain that sections of the Jewish press bitterly attacked him. Yet Mr. Mowrer is probably no more interested in the Jewish Question than the many other big problems which have come within his journalistic ken, and it would be extremely unfair to regard him as in any way a propagandist for anything.

Mr. Mowrer talks about Israel when, of course, he means Judah. There is a deep distinction there. And he talks also about assimilation, which the Jew will not admit as a solution. He protects himself fore and aft by attacking the “anti-Semites,” whoever they are, and by expressing his confidence in the Jews, but on all the decks of his article he gives the facts – and they are the same facts. It ought to be pretty well settled by this time that there are facts, not two sets of facts, but only one set of facts, concerning Jewish influence and activity.

The World’s Work has taken the liberty of setting before the people the only real anti-Jewish article that has appeared in the United States since the present discussion of the Question began, and that article was written by Henry Morgenthau, a Jew whom the government is accustomed to honor whenever it would pay a compliment to the Jews. It turns out that he attacks Jewry in its most tender spot – Zionism. Most people have read it, for it was immediately turned into propaganda and published in hosts of newspapers, in many of them as first-column, first-page news. Mr. Morganthau said that Zionism was not a solution but a surrender. He attacks the whole Palestinian plan from every angle, and not only attacks but belittles it.

Can’t have it both ways

Of course, this is very interesting. But one doesn’t understand the heat displayed. If the Jews wish to go back to Palestine, why all this objection? Mr. Morgenthau does not wish to go back, it is true; it is extremely difficult to find a Jew who does want to go back; but to desire a national land for the Jews is quite another thing, and most Jews desire that. The pity is that they carry into Palestine the same method which puts them upon question here, and they are in danger of tipping over the apple cart in their imperious disregard of the rights of men in Palestine.

Gentile-baiting

Mr. Morgenthau’s motive in writing the article must remain a mystery, because it would seem to leave him practically outside of American Jewry, and of course he is not outside. Not at all. Watch and see. His article was printed in a magazine read and supported by non-Jews and was intended for non-Jews; it was not a plea to his people, it was a kind of confidential explanation, whispered from behind the hand, to non-Jews.

Mr. Morgenthau knows that Zionism is the core of Jewry in this country. The Zionists rule. The Zionists, and not the Americans, dictate the policy of American Jewry. The Zionist program was the only program that went unaltered through the Peace Conference at Versailles. Zionism is the heart of Jewish aspiration. “Not of American Jews,” Mr. Morgenthau may retort. But who are the American Jews? Inquire of the recent convention of Zionists at Cleveland for information.

Khazarian invasion

That convention is worth a story by itself, but it explains why the World’s Work stopped its press for the July issue and made an insertion of eight extra pages for the accommodation of Mr. Morgenthau’s article. The Jews who call themselves Americans had been thrown down and out by the Cleveland convention, and Russian Jews proved themselves the stronger.

It was an event that called for quick explanation. The humiliation of the Americans was something to be covered as speedily as possible. Why the World’s Work should have been chosen as the vehicle is not known. But the presses were stopped and the Morgenthau backfire started.

Coup d’etat

Mr. Morgenthau’s article as a Jewish pronouncement is negligible, but the Editor’s Note that preceded it has the value of unbiased testimony. Referring to the world organization of Zionists, whose chief officer stepped over here from Europe and simply slammed the American Jewish leaders out of office, the editor of the World’s Work has this to say:

“This world organization has a highly centralized form of government. This consists of an international committee, including representatives from all countries that have a local organization. But the real control is vested in what is known as the ‘Inner Actions Council.’ This is a compact body of only seven men and it is dominated by the Jews of Europe.”

The “Jews of Europe” might be still more definitely described as the “Jews of Russia.”

And “Dr. Chaim Weizmann, from London” might more accurately be described as from Pinsk, Russia.

The Russian Jews won, as they have always won, for they are the originators and corrupters of the false political Zionism which is leading so many Jews to disappointment and distress.

The point in all this is that in the silence of the Jewish regimented protest, the voice of the country has had a chance to be heard. The religious press has not been mentioned here, for it deserves a separate account, nor have the many newspapers which have reacted from the previously imposed burden of Jewish propaganda. Editorial speech is becoming freer. Jews themselves are coming to see that the call is not for abuse, but for a clean-up. The expression of the press of the country indicates that there is a Jewish Question and that the Jews used the worst possible tactics in trying to suppress the knowledge of it. They behaved in a way to show what bad masters they would be if given the chance, and what essential cowardice controls their actions. One by one the holds they gained by force of fear, are being loosened. And if the Jews would lay up capital on which to draw – the capital of public confidence in their desire to do the right thing – they would go around and loosen the holds they still have. This, however, is not expected of them. It requires too much foresight.

Due to widespread cyber-espionage, the Russian Secret Service is now using traditional typewriters to protect confidential information – wrote Izvestia on July 11.

This practice is widespread not only at the Nikolai Kovalev, former head of the Federal Security Service, said it was customary to store confidential information in handwritten form even before news about cyber-espionage leaked to the public.

It is also important that every typewriter should have its own unique keyboard, unlike the mass produced ones; each confidential document is linked to a particular typewriter – writes the Russian newspaper.

Bernanke confirms: “If we were to tighten policy, the economy would tank.”

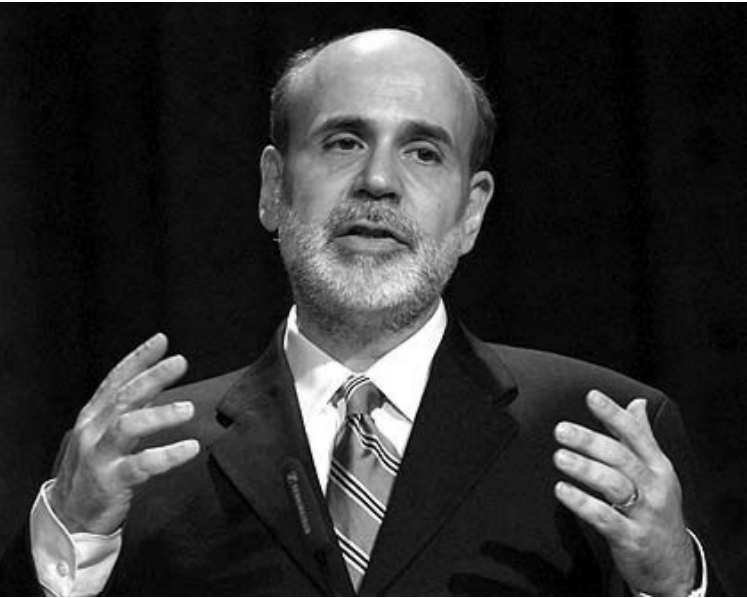

By Mac Slavo

Financial analysts have opined that the United States is well on the road to recovery. They cite various data points to make the case that the multi-trillion dollar bailouts and stimulus have brought us back from the brink of a collapse so serious that Congressional leaders had been told that should the bailouts fail, there was a real possibility of martial law being declared.

We’re doing so well, in fact, that just a couple of years ago President Obama assured the nation of our progress, claiming that we “reversed the recession, avoided a depression, [and] got the economy moving again.”

But, were one to take a step back from the rhetoric of talking heads, political leaders and so-called Wall Street experts, a totally different picture begins to emerge.

Just last month it was announced that not only are housing starts plummeting, but permit applications reported their “largest miss in history,” an indicator that the economy is not as healthy as it has been made out to be. And, while stock markets are hitting all-time record highs, what’s curious is that some of the world’s largest companies, including Intel, IBM, Google, Ebay and FedEx, are reporting significant consumer pull back and earnings below analyst expectations.

And if that hasn’t convinced you, then here is the reality of the situation directly from Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke, the architect of the most massive economic recovery “plan” ever devised in world history.

“I don’t think the Fed can get interest rates up very much, because the economy is weak, inflation rates are low,” Bernanke told the House Financial Services Committee.

“If we were to tighten policy, the economy would tank.”

What Helicopter Ben is saying, despite his pledge to start pulling back the monthly $85 billion (over $1 trillion yearly) in stimulus spending by mid-2014, is that if they stop injecting financial and bond markets with capital, the whole system is going to fall apart, just like it was going to in 2008.

There is no way out for Ben Bernanke’s policies. We’re toast either way. If we keep printing, we eventually hyperinflate our currency to oblivion, leaving our entire system of commerce at a standstill. If we stop printing, the system “tanks,” as noted by the Chairman.

The end result, any way you slice it, is total detonation of our financial, economic and monetary systems:

His answer? “The economy will tank.” Did that tell you everything you needed to know? It should have. He can’t exit. Not now, not ever.

Which paradoxically means he will exit because if an outcome is inevitable then the longer you wait and the more distortion you pump in before it happens the worse it is and he cannot avoid owning the outcome either way. Think it through, folks. Then get ready, because it’s coming.

After the 2008 crisis, former Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson was quoted as saying the United States was on the brink of a total collapse, something his successor Tim Geithner echoed in an open letter to Congress. This is happening. Our Federal Reserve Chairman just confirmed as much. Ignore it at your peril.

Who put these Mugabes and Obamas “in charge” of us?

Rhodesia was betrayed mostly by the Carter administration in 1977-80, which sacrificed that country on the altar of race politics in the U. S., instigated by Zionist Jews. The Carter regime set a huge spying operation against Rhodesia and worked tirelessly to install the Communist Robert Mugabe in their new Zimbabwe. Britain assisted. The U. S. also enabled the Jewish Communist takeover of South Africa. (See “Jewish rule in South Africa,” TFF, Sept. 2012.)

Reveille

The only solution to the World’s Jewish Problem is the extermination of Judaism. All attempts from expulsion to quarantine have failed. Martin Luther, 1483-1546, who led the Protestant Reformation, warned us about these vampires, just as did George Washington, Benjamin Franklin and many, many others up to this very day.

After destroying Rhodesia by handing that country over to the Communists and Kaffirs, then giving away the Panama Canal, Jimmy Carter finally figured it out and hinted at World Jewry being the devil’s reserves behind all those Communist fronts.

The Jewish Problem

All that’s keeping Zionism from world dominance is the one man, Vladimir Putin, President of Nationalist Russia. Let’s get over the “Cold War” mentality. When Putin came to power he gave those Jewish Bolsheviks the boot. And where did that Mafia and its oligarchs settle? In the U. S.!

Russia is not the enemy.
When Adolf Hitler took power in 1933 he booted the Frankfurt Institute of Social Research, a blatantly Marxist organization, its adherents scattering to the winds – like those 1848 Communist revolutionary Jews who fled Europe landing in the U. S. That Frankfurt School bunch introduced us to multiculturalism and brought the concept of political correctness.

Germany was not our enemy. The trouble is within.

Only “We the People,” the Sovereigns, with God’s favor, can regain and control the destiny of this country.

Ask yourself: “Are you willing to back up your faith by action? Is your faith in God and civilization stronger than the Communist faith? Is it worth living and fighting for?”

No more fence straddling; it’s decision time. “Choose this day whom you will serve.” – Joshua 14:15

Anti-Iran sanctions lack legitimacy: International lawyers

A group of renowned international jurists have underscored the illegitimacy of U. S.-led international sanctions imposed on the Islamic Republic over its peaceful nuclear energy program.

The issue of Iran was raised at the “Symposium on Unilateral Sanctions and International Law: Views on Legitimacy and Consequences,” which was held in The Hague on July 11.

Iran’s Ambassador to the Netherlands Kazem Gharibabadi said the participants in the event included international tribunal justices, professors of international law from European and Asian universities as well as researchers.

Abdul G. Koroma, former International Court of Justice (ICJ) Judge and ten senior international jurists discussed the issue of unilateral sanctions from the standpoint of international law.

He said no country or organization is legally authorized to adopt unilateral sanctions, noting that the sanctions imposed on a government for punishment lack legitimacy.

Hisae Nakanishi, professor of the Doshisha University Graduate School of Global Studies, said the sanctions have only made life more difficult for Iranians.

She suggested dialogue with Iran instead of the imposition of sanctions.

Paul de Waart, professor Emeritus of International Law at VU University, Amsterdam, said sanctions that affect basic human rights contravene international law.

Maya Lester, Barrister with Brick Court Chambers, noted that the European Union has failed to provide evidence of diversion in Iran’s nuclear energy program to justify sanctions against the Islamic Republic’s banking sector.

Carlos J. Argüello Gomez, Nicaragua’s Agent in cases before the International Court of Justice, said Iran can take the case of unilateral sanctions to international arbitration.

Scofflaws

At the beginning of 2012, the United States and the European Union imposed new sanctions on Iran’s oil and financial sectors with the goal of preventing other countries from purchasing Iranian oil and conducting transactions with the Central Bank of Iran. The sanctions came into force in early summer 2012.

Piling on

In November 2012, the U. S. Senate approved a new round of sanctions against Iran’s energy, ports, shipping and ship-building sectors.

The illegal U. S.-engineered sanctions have been imposed based on the unfounded accusation that Iran is pursuing non-civilian objectives in its nuclear energy program.

Iran rejects the allegation, arguing that as a committed signatory to the Non-Proliferation Treaty and a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency, it has the right to use nuclear technology for peaceful purposes.

Japan moves to nationalize 400 unclaimed islands

Japan is planning to nationalize scores of unclaimed remote islands in its waters to increase its territorial claims amid ongoing territorial disputes with its neighbors. Japan’s daily Yomiuri Shimbun reported July 15 that the government plans to set up a task force to find owners and names of some 400 remote islands scattered across waters surrounding the Japanese archipelago in a bid to nationalize them.

Looking ahead

“(Japan) plans to end the research next year and quickly take action, including nationalization, to remote islands with no ownership,” the daily said. The report added that officials from Japan’s finance and justice ministries as well as the coast guard will be present at the task force.

The newspaper added that the plan is part of Tokyo’s efforts to “preserve maritime resources.” Japan has long been in a dispute with China over the sovereignty of a group of uninhabited islands in the East China Sea, known as Senkaku in Japan and Diaoyu in China. The disputed islands are controlled by Japan as part of the Okinawa prefecture. These islands are located near a crucial shipping lane and would give the owner exclusive oil, mineral and fishing rights in the surrounding waters. On September 11, 2012, Tokyo signed a deal to buy three of the islands from their private Japanese owner in line with plans to nationalize the archipelago.

Samantha Power’s opening statement to Congress

By Philip Weiss
uruknet.info

Samantha Power wants to be our next ambassador to the United Nations. Here’s her opening statement to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. She mentions Israel eight times in the statement and “the United States” eight times.

- “First, the UN must be fair. The UN cannot focus disproportionate attention on a few, while giving a pass to others flouting their international obligations. There cannot be one standard for one country and another standard for all others. The United States has no greater friend in the world than the State of Israel. Israel is a country with whom we share security interests and, even more fundamentally, with whom we share core values – the values of democracy, human rights, and the rule of law. America has a special relationship with Israel. And yet the General Assembly and Human Rights Council continue to pass one-sided resolutions condemning Israel above all others. Israel – not Iran, not Sudan, not North Korea – is the one country with a fixed place on the Human Rights Council’s agenda. Israel’s legitimacy should be beyond dispute, and its security must be beyond doubt.

stand up for Israel and work tirelessly to defend it.”

New electric car charging station opens in Budapest

Meanwhile the U. S., sitting atop the world’s richest oil deposits, just keeps fighting Israel’s “oil” wars.

hungarianambiance.com

The Ministry of Rural Development has inaugurated a new electric car charging station in Budapest. The new charging pylon, which contains two charging stations, is the tenth such unit in the capital. The “filling station,” which is freely accessible to the public, was inaugurated by the Minister for Rural Development Sándor Fazekas, who said the charging station facilitates the increased use of electric vehicles. Fidesz MEP Béla Glattfelder, who also attended the ceremony, stressed that the European Union promotes the use of renewable energy resources. It was in this spirit that the EU Directive that aims to achieve the widespread use of electric vehicles within the European Union was developed. Accordingly, seven thousand such electric car charging stations will be installed throughout the country by 2020.

Minister of State for Environmental Affairs Zoltán Illés told Hungarian news agency MTI that the Government was committed to create conditions necessary for the widespread use of electrically powered vehicles in Hungary. One of the steps in this process is that the Ministry for Rural Development is the very first public administration body to have acquired electric cars, and their number is expected to grow in the future as funding becomes available.

Establishment hero Bill Gates sold you out to the NSA, but that’s not all...

By Jackson Reed
activistpost.com

Bill Gates gets heaped with praise from the establishment for his business prowess and his so-called philanthropy. In turn, society seems to elevate him to near godlike status for his generosity and “humanitarian work.” He’s been the poster child for the “see, not all big corporations are evil” argument. Well, not anymore. Recent revelations that his company Microsoft has, for decades, built back doors for government spying may put a few chinks in Gates’ shining public armor.

Bad boy

And if one dares look any closer at Gates’ other endeavors, he may discover that their intentions are not nearly as benevolent as general public perception leads us to believe. First, let me try to outline just how completely Microsoft sold you out to spy agencies. After NSA whistleblower Snowden outed Microsoft as complicit in the PRISM information sharing program, it has come to light that NSA has a back door to Microsoft-owned Skype, Windows operating system updates contain bypasses for the NSA, the encryption for Outlook is unlocked for the NSA prior to launches, and Internet Explorer is likely the most compromised.

In short, this means the NSA has nearly full access to roughly 92% of the commercial computers in the world. If the description of the NSA-Microsoft marriage above isn’t clear enough, perhaps a video showing what a spy can see when you’re running Microsoft products will clarify it. The video was put together by private surveillance profiteer Mandiant to show how China is hacking America, presumably in hopes of stoking a very profitable cyber cold war. In their zeal to show how they catch alleged Chinese hackers in the act, they also reveal the generous back door they have into Windows computers: As activistpost.com reported when this video was released, actual hackers called the video a fake because no real hacker would ever use Windows. Whether this video is phony propaganda to incite cyberwar spending is for another article. Regardless, the complete takeover of a Windows user’s computer by a private analyst is what’s most disturbing about the video. This access makes keystroke logger technology, which records every keystroke made on the computer, look utterly obsolete. Now that it’s been established that Bill Gates was not the good guy you thought he was all along, let’s take a closer look at what the establishment props up as a hero.

But not for himself

Bill Gates is an admitted advocate of population reduction. He’s admitted that the goal of his immunization aid to third world countries is to reduce population. Don’t believe me? See our online links. Also, through his foundation, he owns 500,000 shares of Monsanto’s stock and is a public salesman of GMO crops around the world. And this is just scratching the surface of who the real Bill Gates is. Gates is a monopoly-man sell-out who now has nearly unlimited resources to dedicate to eradicating the plague he calls humanity from the earth. Hopefully, this Microsoft spying story will cause more people to question Gates’ true intentions and those of an establishment that would deceive us into thinking he’s somehow a knight in shining armor. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Trayvon hero of invaders from Planet Mediocracy

African-Americans: do not be misled by the Zionist-controlled media.

The acquittal of George Zimmerman is being used by the Zionist-controlled media in a blatant attempt to whip up African American hatred of European Americans – and they have engaged in this utterly false anti-European hate-fest as a means of diverting African American attention away from the real cause of so many problems in Black society, namely Jewish Supremacists. The Zionist-controlled media deliberately create the impression among many African Americans that Zimmerman is “White” and that the incident in Florida was just another example of “White racism.”

Not so fast!

The reality – as anyone who stops for a second just to look at the facts – is that Zimmerman is of mixed racial descent, and self-classifies as Hispanic. The Zionist media however, have gone out of the way to incite hatred not against Hispanics, but European Americans. All African Americans should first and foremost ask the question “why” have the media deliberately misrepresented Zimmerman’s race? The Zionist logic is quite simple: if they can get African Americans to fight with European Americans, or get Hispanic Americans to fight with African Americans and so on, so much the better for those Jewish Supremacist controllers whose activities get ignored in the resulting melee. It is a clear-cut case of the “divide and conquer” strategy at work. For example, the Jewish Supremacist extremist pressure group masquerading under the name of the “Southern Poverty Law Center” issued a press release following the Zimmerman acquittal.

Hatemeister

The statement, issued in the name of notorious Jewish Supremacist and gentile-hater Richard Cohen, President and CEO of the SPLC, claimed that “Racial bias reverberates in our society like the primordial Big Bang... The jury has spoken. Now, we must speak out against the racial bias that still infects our society and distorts our perception of the world.” Yet, as shown above, Zimmerman is not even a European American! That little fact does not bother the hater Cohen or his fellow tribalists who run the media, and insist that “racism” is the cause of the problem. African Americans should ask themselves the following questions:

1. Why do the media not focus on the much more serious problem of Black-on-Black crime? All the statistics show that African Americans, who make up 13 percent of America’s population, commit

The large violent underclass in Sanford, Florida

By Kyle Rogers
topconservativenews.com

On February 26, 2012 George Zimmerman was forced to shoot Trayvon Martin to protect his own life. The incident has been a major media event ever since. We keep hearing that George Zimmerman “profiled” Trayvon. President Obama held a national press conference to claim that Black males are unfairly “profiled.” Sanford, Florida, has a large, violent, criminal underclass. How do I know this? For starters, many of the thugs advertise they are thugs on social media. Charleston Thug Watch recently demonstrated that there are a large number of young Black males advertising their criminal lifestyle on twitter. It doesn’t take much work to find accounts on Facebook of Sanford residents flashing guns and gang signs.

“Multicultural” nightmare

However, the evidence does not stop there. Sanford only has 53,500 people. Thirty percent are Black, twenty percent are Latino, five percent are Asian and the rest are White. For only 53,500 there is an absolutely stunning amount of shocking, outrageous, and horrific crime. Horrific, near fatal, hammer attack in Sanford. March 27th, 2012: A fifty year old White man was brutally beaten with a hammer by two Black males. A witness saw the attack and called police. The victim’s injuries were severe and he was left with serious permanent damage. It was probably the intent of the suspects to kill him. The suspects are Julius Bender and Yahaziel Israel. When this horrific incident took place it only received a small blip in the news. The Orlando Sentinel censored the race of the victim even though it was in the police report. In an email, the Orlando Sentinel writer who wrote the report freely admitted the race of the victim was censored on purpose.

Shortly after I started writing about the incident on Examiner.com and this website, the Orlando Sentinel even scrubbed the suspects’ mug shots. At the time of the attack, Trayvon Martin was local news in every market in the entire United States. Yet all this man got was a small censored blurb in the local daily. It stands to reason that the media’s Trayvon frenzy at least partly emboldened the perps to attack this man. I interviewed the victim’s sister, uncovering significant circumstantial evidence of a racial motive that the victim’s sister then gave to police.

Abnormal

You may have noticed that one of the suspects has a Hebrew name. His father is the local leader of a murderous anti-White religious cult. They call themselves the true Hebrews and believe they are preparing for a race war with White people. The group is called “Nation of Yahweh” and it is run by the notorious cult leader Yahweh Ben Yahweh. Members of the group have been convicted of fourteen murders and two attempted murders. Watchdogs believe the cult is responsible for even more. The group’s leader served eleven years for his role in the murders. Yahaziel’s sister also has a Hebrew name, suggesting that his father raised them in the murderous cult. On April 4, 2012, Black males opened fire into a large crowd in front of a home. Three people, including a pregnant woman, were injured. All three survived. The baby was unharmed. Overwhelmingly Black and particularly notorious, this was the second shooting in the same neighborhood in only three days. During the first shooting a Black male victim was seriously injured. Some other victims had their car shot up, but were not injured. The perp was a Black male. Corey Rose, White, was trying to break up an altercation outside of the apartment more than 50% of the nation’s homicides – the vast majority of their victims being other African Americans. According to the FBI, there were 14,548 homicides in 2011, of which number 53.7% were positively identified as having been committed by African Americans (and a large number of the remaining figures by Hispanic Americans). In those 513 days between Trayvon Martin’s death and the Zimmerman verdict, 11,106 African Americans have murdered other African Americans. The single greatest threat to African Americans is not, therefore, as the Zionist-controlled media have made it, “White racism,” but rather internal community violence.

Facts

2. The next obvious question African Americans must ask is: why is there such an increase of violence in their community over the past few decades?

Older African Americans will confirm that the violent crime rates and other social ills which plague that community did not exist a few decades ago. More than 70 percent of African Americans are born to single parents; more than 60 percent of African American males will end up in jail and millions are disenfranchised because of felony convictions, to name but a few of the biggest issues. Why has this sea change come about? Rather than blaming European Americans – as the media would have them do –

African Americans should look at who has promoted drugs and the gangster lifestyle as “cool” and the “norm” among their young people. It is not European Americans who are responsible for this – it is those Jewish Supremacists who control the mass media and Hollywood who have promoted all these ills. It is not European Americans who are the leading “slum lords” allowing African Americans and Hispanics to live today in degrading conditions. It is not European Americans who push for “open borders” immigration policies, which negatively affect African American unemployment rates. African Americans must realize that by participating in an anti-European American hate fest created by the Zionist-controlled media, they are playing into the hands of the “divide and conquer” strategy devised precisely to keep attention away from their real enemy: organized Jewish Supremacism which seeks to enslave all under Zion.

is for someone you know.

Conclusion

All of these shocking crimes occurred in Sanford within one year of the Trayvon incident. These are not the only shootings and beatings, there were others. These are just some of the worst ones. Young Black males in Sanford are committing not just crimes, but shocking, horrific ones on a regular basis. If you lived there, would you be more cautious around young Blacks? Is racial profiling justified if it keeps people safer? Can any Sanford resident be blamed for caution around young Black males?

“We must realize that our party’s most powerful weapon is racial tensions. By propounding into the consciousness of the dark races that for centuries they have been oppressed by Whites, we can mold them to the program of the Communist Party. In America we will aim for subtle victory. While inflaming the Negro minority against the Whites, we will endeavor to instill in the Whites a guilt complex for their exploitation of the Negroes. We will aid the Negroes to rise in prominence in every walk of life, in the professions and in the world of sports and entertainment. With this prestige, the Negro will be able to intermarry with the Whites and begin a process which will deliver America to our cause.”

SOLUTION

Having watched many of the classic war movies that were broadcast to celebrate Memorial Day, I am sympathetic to all the military men and women who got killed believing themselves fighting on behalf of their families and country.

But I have no respect for the treasonous presidents and government traitors having committed the acts that were responsible for those deaths.

I also have no respect for a flag that now symbolizes this Jewish imperialist Police State, though it once stood for liberty and freedom.

Also, in my opinion, the best way to secure our border is to establish machine gun nests all along it and order them manned by our military personnel who are presently stationed around the world.

Not humbled by his 2012 presidential debate gaffes, Texas Governor Rick Perry still harbors White House aspirations. When leaked hints led to media queries, Perry’s attempts at playing coy over a period of one week were amusingly amateurish. Virtually all career politicians are avaricious narcissists who were born with larceny in their twisted minds. It sickens me to watch these clowns’ antics aimed at gaining access to the Oval Office.

WAR OF TERRORISM

How many truly believe we are fighting a War on Terrorism, that our involvement in the Middle East is in the interest of “freedom and justice”? I’d be willing to bet that the majority of people reading this know at least a handful of people afflicted with these misconceptions. So why do we allow such ignorance to continue without making an effort to dissuade our peers from believing such nonsense? I’m talking about individuals here. Why do we sit in front of a TV watching government stooges prevaricate without making a serious effort to combat their lies with a healthy dose of truth? A newspaper like this one is a start, but the circulation of such publications is limited, and usually they’re only read by people who already know the truth.

That’s not enough! In this age of great deception, everyone of integrity has a great responsibility to combat lies with the truth, and should use every opportunity to spread it around. When you are at a public event, after church services, or just out and about, engage people in conversation and share ideas. We need to spread the truth for the sake of spreading the truth, not in an effort to recruit people but rather simply to give them something to think about. Truth is not a private thing; the realm of ideas belongs to anyone willing to take the responsibility for thinking.

COUNTERATTACK

Poor Paula Deen! What a shame such a nice, pretty woman has been so savagely persecuted, made to suffer all the criticism leveled at her for a remark made in private decades ago. She is doubly vulnerable because White and from the South.

I would not be at all surprised if there is a sizable number of White Americans – and even some bold, patriotic Blacks – who, if asked their opinions of a certain arrogant, obnoxious individual in the Democrat Party, would reply: “A Jew-created, White-hating, Marxist nigger”; whose hidden agenda, I might add, is to dismantle and destroy White America. That “N” word, correctly interpreted, summarizes exclusively the worst characteristics of the race applied to individuals, and is not directed at the people as a whole. If someone demands an apology after hearing as much, he should be told to kiss the speaker’s rear end and go to hell, period.

When are Americans going to treat with derision such Communist abuse-words as “racist,” “xenophobe” and “bigot” coming from enemies and traitors to the White race or simply “useful idiots” in the Communist design to destroy our Western world?

I love my country, but am distressed that we’ve allowed a foreign nation to control us, squander America’s tax dollars, murder our military, and the U. S. government aids and abets this heinous crime committed by the bloodthirsty, most corrupt regime in the world, threatening any whistleblower who dares expose the truth. I am referring to the brutal attack inflicted on the USS Liberty.

The coverup by our government and its ultimatum to punish anyone exposing that crime doesn’t hold water. There are more holes in this story than a block of Swiss cheese. Why should this admiral disgrace himself, his country and uniform if he were not on mind control drugs? What about the parents of those 34 dead sailors? Besides a prison sentence or firing squad, what could be worse for the surviving crewmen if they dared to speak out than the living hell they went through during that entire attack?

What kind of voodoo magic or spell did this treasonous admiral and our government impose on all these men?

INTROSPECTION

Hopefully all of us Whites are proud to be who we are and want to hang onto our heritage, right? Well, we must quit simply complaining and do something about that. First, let’s stop condoning race mixing!

Most of our people are thinking, well, I’m in agreement there. But, are you? Do you have “a friend” who has committed miscegenation? If you still associate with that person, then you’re accepting also the destruction of our endangered species.

Are you steadily buying Hollywood’s race-mixing, homosexual movies that keep “entertaining” naive White children with this God-forbidden filth? Do you try to make your “I’m sorry I’m White” friends racially aware of what’s really going on?

I want to know how many of you have plans that are realistic. Are we ready to get off the complaining mode and take actions that will start increasing our White family? People, other races are overrunning us and it’s due to our own kind race-mixing; we’re partly to blame for associating with those types and thus condoning their deeds.

Also, how many of us were emotionally touched by this Zimmerman trial? Please tell me everyone saw through that agenda, and we are not falling for the propaganda of our White-hating, Nigger-loving media. For Christ’s sake, Zimmerman is a half breed who was actually doing the right thing. If Trayvon hadn’t been stopped, had broken into a house, raped and killed some White woman, would the media have made such a fuss?

Deeds, not words, measure a nation or individual

By Olaf Childress
editor@firstfreedom.net

We can participate in today’s mad grab for the media-fashioned indexes of success or go our private ways seeking the more satisfying real thing. After all, what does a guilt tormented man take to bed with him knowing the crowd’s adulation was either phony or gratuitous? No matter how rich in trophies and titles, slavery to the system can’t compare with a pauper’s untroubled sleep, having thanked kind Providence for his sufficiency rather than envying another’s greater wealth.

Ten years ago this month a couple of Jews pretending to be Christian preachers enticed him to join their “rally to save the Ten Commandments Monument” that they had caused to be installed in the Alabama Supreme Court’s rotunda at Montgomery, crediting puppet judge Roy Moore from Gadsden with this caper – turning the latter into an increasingly popular hero. So much for the public’s misinformed perceptions.

A setup

Those two Zionistas kept in close touch with all knowing or unwitting participants in this false flag operation: a Black federal judge in that capitol city who would order the monument removed, the State’s chief justice whom the people had elected after he defied an earlier fedguy mandate to take down from his Gadsden courtroom wall a Ten Commandments plaque, the City of Montgomery, the worldwide mediacracy and hosts of “protesters” wearing Stars of David among a few real Christians camped on the courthouse plaza for ten days. That whole circus played according to script, its final Saturday night act starring busloads of “Gospel”-singing Blacks chanting and frolicking with the Freedom Riders from Washington, District of Corruption. Later, those two Jews directed the monument’s removal and the message went out that our State had bid Religion farewell.

Today’s reality

All is in its place. Magistrates err, but justice remains eternal. The weed is merely a plant that has sprouted where some judge opines it shouldn’t have. Neutral things are without fault – land, money, machinery – but the means by which one acquires and manages such externals renders him in the opinions of God and himself ennobled or vulgarized, even if others fail to perceive those verdicts right off.

Our laws governing civilized men and women within social norms, an understood compact, increase into countless thousands when we allow constitutional illiterates to enjoy citizenship’s rights and protections as demanded by over-educated Zionistas disregarding its responsibilities. Thus a symbiotic relationship – intruders hoping for unearned merit badges and the Z-factor exploiting them – turns government upside down for sinister purposes. Otherwise the Ten Commandments should suffice.

The evil that is “out there” can do us no harm if we’ll just stick to First Things. One remains poor indeed who has neither a cause nor useful employment. Increasing numbers are discovering that Communism, an unpredictable phenomenon pervading the world, stares us here and now in our faces, and not a thing we can do about it.

Nothing?

Well, there’s always suicide. However, that’s reserved to the suddenly conscience-stricken post traumatic distress syndrome soldier-persons executing all those foreign “wars,” i.e., they who’ve been over there “mopping up” for months or years ahead of Congress even blowing a starting whistle.

We, the people, can certainly prepare and declare ourselves individually capable of recovering those powers not delegated to the post-Lincoln-disordered-Homeland-Obscurity-armchair-warrior types winking back and forth in Washington, District of Corruption, just following evil orders from their New York-Tel Aviv axis. And the way to go about it is rather simple. Every true sovereign adopts and sticks with a set of principles – natural to any flesh-and-blood human, more difficult over the lifetimes of artificial personhoods whether called joint venture corporation, Church or State. You and I, unlike a compromised apparatchik, remain free to choose not just whom we’ll fraternize with but avoid.

Should neither properly commissioned captain, crew, stewards, chaplain nor most passengers know what else to do, drifting is a vessel’s only motion when its engines or sails malfunction – until some thinker, even if without a license for solving such problems, does so anyway.

Our resolution

Since we see no challenge that one can’t meet, nor an unanswerable question, ours just a matter of communicating with God for guidance and then putting that ship back on course; this decision, if it’s to be worth the bother, is a two-part declaration of independence: firstly and more easily an internally audacious oath which proclaims Death Before Dishonor; next, the greater difficulty of keeping that promise sacred throughout our remaining days.

No matter who is punishing himself by inducing others to fight his war for control of all the guns, gold, oil and media at this moment, he’s doomed to experience that same slip as happened between the cup and Alexander’s or Caesar’s lip.

For nobody can put today’s technology back in the bottle. When only one side has guns or A-bombs they’re a threat, but with parity nobody wastes money on overkill; a cup of sufficiency assures healthy sleep.

Speaking of legal tender, who can eat gold? Robots will soon harvest all metals and minerals needed by those survivors in control of themselves, and they won’t need petroleum for their solar-electric vehicles or privacy-secured communications.

Death before dishonor

Resolve won’t make us anti-social. In fact, others seeing this invocation of divine intervention breaking fresh ripples across a becalmed Ancient Mariner’s self-imposed exile, his desolate standstill ended turning again toward that splendid harbor where honest virtue and traditional marriage yet endure, many will repent their indulgences and join our celebration.

For a good teacher doesn’t need to post certificates of merit, not even when those who hate his personal example’s wisdom chastise every move he makes. Though the dull-witted require a thousand years to see it, the Perfection behind nature – accepted by most Aryans throughout all ages – will prevail.

Ignorant indeed is he who doesn’t pray for guidance from that Presence which is aware of our every need before we utter it alone or among any multitude of kindred spirits gathered in accord. This idea’s truth summons history to witness. Many nations since the dawn of writing affirm as much, although each religion’s rituals struggle to reinterpret unwavering faith when a new gaggle of scientists comes challenging that reverence with its latest discoveries.

We reply that God’s presence needs no further proof than this universal awareness down through the millennia, inasmuch as science itself proclaims time the ultimate measure. Let’s help them get past their black holes and suchlike recent culs-de-sac by subjecting what’s known for today’s certainty under the laser – starting with global warming. No?

The ice shelves are in fact increasing? Okay, how about sustainable development, heterosexually-biased marriage, economic stimuli, racism, homophobia... Hold on! This is science?

According to the Jewish mediacracy, yes! Therefore we (they) are feverishly working to reduce those ancient heresies and newly discovered truths into a unified field, clearing up all misunderstandings on the way to Shangri La.

Problem is, we’re already there.

Too much

Prodding cattle through the chutes with hand-held “stimulus” zappers at auctions tends to move hormone-fed beef smartly along, sustaining not only hordes of human buttocks waddling from the typical Burger King but, additionally, all those addicted welfare recipients’ impressions of endless abundance.

Grabbing credit for today’s luxuries and everyman’s gadgets, a sustained “wartime” economy on steroids although few of us have jobs, these “stimulus” packages from our Great Black Father obscure the fact that FDR’s make-work alphabet soup of agencies and LBJ’s Great Society did this number way back. But now it’s working? Take away the government “entitlements” and what remains is a Greater Depression. In the 1930s, not even P. T. Barnum could have put food on our tables by printing fiat geld.

The difference?

Today’s technology, which that Whore House Kenyan had nothing to do with. One immigrant laborer atop machinery is now planting, spraying and harvesting, feeding more mouths than did a dozen American farmers back when we were free.

Look around. Government contractors are building superhighways; underground bunkers to house federal agencies; public schools, new courthouses, parks, prisons. Employment isn’t a problem for engineers married to the system or grunts who speak no English. Unemployment checks pacify, geld and chase from the workforce others who would ask what the hell is going on.

Update

The Great Game is no longer between England and Russia; it’s here. And anyone who fails to understand why the offshoring of jobs, those 1965 immigration “reforms,” “headstart” racial discrimination and other programs designed to drive Whites into the Jewish world matrix – is game. They bait this trap cunningly with nothing but paper notes which buy chemically-contaminated food, Chinese-manufactured automobiles and clothing from India.

The Great Game is nominally a contest across international borders. On both sides its perpetrators would have those lured into uniforms or sacrificing toward “the effort” believe they’re protecting good from evil. Its actual purpose is to confuse and pacify internal unrest, diverting attention from all that’s wrong at home. But the gamble by which those armchair warlords up the ante, doubling their Big Lie each time its lesser chutzpah stands naked, can’t work forever. In due course – after every bluff fails – it will leave them wailing at the Nuremberg wall.

When and why is for God to know and us to find out. Obviously we’ll receive no more immunity from error than those poor magistrates enslaved to the system. There’s enough good and evil in everyone that we don’t need to step outdoors for an exciting challenge. Grasping little beyond the way circuit breakers prevent our houses from burning down and how human conscience holds a soul-and-flesh individual’s appetite within bounds (governs but never curtails progressive motion outright), we must give devout thanks. Unlike those who would solve every riddle and subjugate all others to their bidding, exiling themselves from the thrill of challenges on a level field by becoming static, all-knowing automatons, let’s hang onto to what they hate but can’t emulate.

And more

Have you noticed? “The Home Front” only comes into play when “we” have got ourselves into another fray abroad. Then we’re to do our parts, report any suspicious activities, accept “temporary” curtailments of constitutionally-guaranteed rights, fear and obey.

The Chosenites constantly remind us – if using clever asides via their mediacracy rather than coming right out with it – that they are in every way superior not only to Goyimdom but this cosmopolitan nature they’re busily redesigning within which we’re to comply or die. Like all-knowing automatons, those would-be gods have the answers, yet still contradict themselves by reaching, reaching, ever overreaching for more. This puts them far below Plato’s job description of the ultimate Mind, namely that which controls others without moving itself.

So, brothers and sisters, those are mere humans the same as you and I pulling our pants on one leg at a time. We can learn much from them by paying closer attention to what they do – than repeatedly say.

Change

Let’s liberate these White States from their propaganda, paper money and sway. If you truly love justice, you’ll stop letting them define your every predilection. It’s all right to prefer the company of one’s own kind. Why don’t Khazarians, Blacks and Hispanics grovel or apologize for that huge disparity between the vastness of their crimes compared with Aryan civility? You know the answer. It’s because we, our scruples, altruism and readiness to turn the other cheek stand as too beckoning a host for those parasites to ignore.

Which means toughen up, blend into the matrix and cease being ourselves?

NOTA. None of the above. Exactly the opposite. Our people are tough enough. Let’s just remember who we are. Benjamin Franklin said:

“In whatever country Jews have settled in any great numbers, they have lowered its moral tone, depreciated its commercial integrity, have segregated themselves and have not been assimilated, have sneered at and tried to undermine the Christian religion, have built up a State within a State, and have, when opposed, tried to strangle that country to death financially.

“If you do not exclude them from the United States in the Constitution, in less than 200 years they will have swarmed in, in such great numbers that they will dominate and devour the land and change our form of government.

“If you do not exclude them, in less than 200 years our descendants will be working in the fields to furnish the substance, while they will be in the counting house rubbing their hands. I warn you, gentlemen, if you do not exclude the Jews for all time, your children will curse you in your graves. Jews, gentlemen, are Asiatics; they will never be otherwise.”

Harsh words? In those days a man like Franklin could speak his mind before an exclusively White Christian gathering of Statesmen without fear. Hey, it’s Saturday Evening, and The Post has arrived.
